Return to Dark Ages Threatened, Sec. Hull Asserts

Fears "New Descent into Conditions of International Anarchy"

Washington, May 13 (AP)—Secretary of State Hull said tonight that the world is menaced with "a new descent into the conditions of international anarchy which characterized the dark ages" and that the United States has no choice but to expand its armaments program.

He appealed, however, to those who believe in "international morality" to "hold fast to the conviction that law and morality will triumph over the forces of lawlessness and chaos."

Speaking before the American Society of International Law, the secretary denounced nations using force to achieve their ends. He mentioned no names, but officials close to him indicated he had Germany, and possibly Soviet Russia, in mind when he said:

Paris Admits Nazi Advance All along Important Fronts

Allies Forced To Give Way to Germans in Belgium and Netherlands

By The Associated Press

Paris, May 13—Allied advance motorized columns poured their fire into "massive" German attacks in The Netherlands and Belgium today but gave ground all along the line except west of Liege, Belgium, where the French counter-attacked with tanks.

A French war ministry spokesman emphasized that while French, British, Dutch and Belgians were retiring slowly in the face of savage onslaughts by German motorized corps and "tremendous" blasting attacks from the air, the withdrawal was in accordance with strategic plan and could not be considered a retreat.

The heaviest fighting, the French reported, occurred in the Belgian Ardennes mountains, north of France, where the Germans threw several divisions of infantry and between 1,500 and 2,000 tanks into a smashing blow in an effort to sever Allied communications.

"It's the big push," said one official commentator, but "we've erected the wall against it."

On this wall, he said, "the great battle will be fought."

The Germans were "able to advance," said the nightly French communique of this sector.

"Our cavalry units, after having fulfilled their mission to retard the enemy, fell back on the Meuse which was reached by the enemy on a part of its course."

The Meuse (Maas) river swings southward, south of Liege, and after passing through Namur and Dinant, enters French territory at Givet, some forty-five miles west of the Luxembourg border.

Battle for Longwy

The Germans were reported waging violent battle for possession of Longwy, French town at the junction of the French Luxembourg and Belgian borders. The French still held the town.

The battleline along Luxembourg was described as partly in French, partly in Luxembourg territory.

Farther north official spokesmen of the war ministry declared the Germans had taken but one of the Liege forts, that at Eben Emael, fifteen miles north of the famous fortified center which stemmed the German advance twelve days in 1914.

(The Germans said the Swastika had waved over the Liege "citadel" since morning.)

German infantry with a spearhead of two motorized divisions which poured through this gap in the Albert canal defense line appeared to have been checked in the sector west of Liege, French spokesmen said.

It was here, in the vicinity of St. Trond, 35 miles east of Brussels, the Belgian capital, and thirty miles northwest of Liege, that the French reported in a communique their counter-attack 'mostly led by tanks."

Report Heavy Losses

"Heavy losses of the enemy" were reported inflicted in this clash of machine-age armies, fought to stop the Germans until the main Allied force can arrive.

A French force of tanks and armored cars was reported earlier today to have waged its first large scale battle with a similar German column and broken it up.

Yet farther north, in Holland, the French said the Germans made progress "especially to the south of the lower Meuse river."

North of the Meuse river, in The Netherlands, the Allies were withdrawing within the Grebbe water line to give the Dutch unique defense system its conclusive test against a modern war machine of motorized and air forces.

The spokesman said "tremendous" air battles were accompanying the troop movements on both sides.

An official French compilation showed the Germans have lost 400 airplanes in three and a half days of this violent activity.

Hundreds of planes on both sides bombed enemy objectives, seeking to break up moving columns.

Nazi Attacks Repulsed

Enemy attacks on the outposts of the French Maginot line east of the Moselle and near the Saar were reported by the high command to have been repulsed.

Belgians Resist Germans in a Day Of Hard Fighting

Severe Combats Reported from All along the Front

By ROBERT OKIN

Brussels, May 13 (AP)—The Belgian high command acknowledged tonight that the Germans had waged day-long offensives on the entire Belgian frontier but declared they had been met with "stiff resistance."

Its communique said:

"Throughout the day our troops fought severe combats. Everywhere they put up stiff resistance to the enemy.

"A village which had fallen in the hands of the enemy has been reoccupied after a counter attack by Belgian units supported by tanks.

"During the operations of the last few days, certain infantry units, cyclists, chasseurs in the Ardennes and light motorized troops have particularly distinguished themselves, having fulfilled their mission with courage and bravery.

"The crew of a Belgian airplane shot down in territory occupied by the enemy succeeded in regaining their posts after crossing the German lines."

Nazi Pressure Constant

An earlier communique indicated that Nazi pressure was almost constant. It said engagements had taken place "at divers points" during Sunday night and that, starting early today, "enemy motorized forces delivered new attacks against all our positions."

Washington, May 13 (AP)—President Roosevelt acted today to speed up America's armament, working with an extraordinary defense fund which reliable sources said would probably exceed $500,000,000.

Initial reaction to the news of his intention indicated that, as a result of the total war now raging in Europe, his recommendation would have many supporters in both House and Senate no matter how large it might be.

Shairman Hay (D-Ky) of the House Military Committee, who with Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval group was called to confer with Mr. Roosevelt tomorrow, told reporters he favored an additional $1,000,000,000 for the army and navy combined.

Berlin Says Contact Has Been Established with Parachute Troops in Rotterdam Streets

Berlin, May 14 (Tuesday) (AP)—The German radio declared this morning that more than 1,000 enemy airplanes have been destroyed during the first three days of fighting in Belgium and Holland.

By LYNN HEINZERLING

Berlin, May 13, (AP)—Adolf Hitler's legions hoisted their Swastika flag today over the citadel on the Northern edge of fortress-ringed Liege and broke into the Belgian city, the German high command reported, in their crushing advance through the low countries.

German troops are still fighting with the Belgians for some of the outer forts of Liege, but others continued westward of the stronghold and to the north while in the Netherlands the Nazi announced occupation of fully half the country.

A deeply penetrating thrust of armored forces in the Netherlands, the high command said, established contact with troops landed by parachutes around Rotterdam. DNB, official German news agency, declared that as a result "the so-called Holland fortification system has been flanked."

Hundreds of thousands of German troops were sweeping west and southwest through the little kingdoms toward what loomed as perhaps the bloodiest mass battle in history. British and French forces sped to the aid of embattled Dutch and Belgians.

DNB said one German force in the Netherlands captured about 18,000 Dutch soldiers; a Dutch general and his staff were taken.

Tremendous Air Battle

While Hitler's army aws driving for the heart of the lowlands with speedy armored cars leading the way on the ground, a tremendous fight went on for supremacy in the air.

The high command reported 320 planes were destroyed yesterday and more than fifty this morning alone. (According to an official French compilation, the Germans lost 400 planes up to Monday noon.)

Germany warned France that German parachute troops should be treated as soldiers, not spies, and announced for every parachute trooper shot by France in violation of international law she would shoot ten captured French soldiers.

Thousands of War Refugees Flee From Netherlands and Belgium

By The Associated Press

War refugees by the tens of thousands streamed across the lowland countries today.

They sought havens from the blitzkrieg attacks of German bombing planes and mechanized land units.

Belgian roads were reported choked with civilans fleeing to France or the hallowed fields of Flanders, plodding along on foot with bundles on their backs or sitting precariously on carts overflowing with personal belongings.

Long lines of refugees from Liege and Namur, in the Belgian battle area, jammed the streets of Brussels.

Heirs of the royal house of the Netherlands, including Princess Juliana, Prince Bernard and their two children, arrived in London—with their nine-months old daughter, Irene, in a gas-proof box—to guarantee the survival of the royal House of Orange-Nassau no matter what happens.

In England, physicians and refugees began a nation-wide check on more than a million school children, ready to remove them from thickly-settled areas.

The British government commandeered Ulster hall in Belfast, northern Ireland, to house Belgian and Dutch refugees from the war zone.

In Paris, voluntary departure was resumed with about one-third of the city's 3,000,000 poulation already in the country and many more following.

United States Ambassador John Cudahy conferred with Belgian Red Cross officials on the critical problem of feeding and housing refugees in Belgium, described as "already a tremendous job."

Queen Wilhelmina Sent To London as Titantic Battle Gets under Way

Outflanked from North and South and with Water Defense Line Pierced Hollanders Are Forced Back; Nazi Parachute Troops Holding Out in Part of Rotterdam

By MAX HARRELSON

Amsterdam, May 13 (AP) — Outflanked from the north and from the south, with their famous Grebbe water defense line pierced and with Rotterdam threatened by German motor columns but fifteen miles away, the Dutch tonight vacated Amsterdam as a seat of government and sent their queen to safety in England.

The Dutch high command acknowledged in a communique tonight that the Germans had succeeded in taking "a small sector of the Grebbe line," their main water defense system running south of the Zuider Zee to the Rhine, and that although Netherlands troops by fierce fighting had retaken the sector they could not hold it when the Germans launched fresh attacks.

(The Germans have reported penetrating this line between Amersfoort and Rhenen, about thirty-five miles east of Amsterdam.)

To the south, the high command acknowledged that Germans with motorized equipment had raced through the Langstraat (south of the Maas river) and had reached and passed the Moerdijk bridge which crosses the Maas but fifteen miles south of Rotterdam.

In Rotterdam itself, German parachute and transport-landed troops were admitted still to be holding out "stubbornly."

(The Germans today said "contact" had been established with this Rotterdam force.)

Nazis Hold Northeast

Moreover, the Germans were acknowledged to be in possession of most of the northeast provinces and to have reached the east coast of the Zuider Zee, that great tongue of the North Sea which has turned partly to fresh water because of Dutch dykes.

From there, the Germans threatened the huge dam at the mouth of the Zuider Zee, for a march south on Amsterdam. The dam! however, is strongly defended.

The radio station at Helversum announced the decision to transfer the government to an undisclosed place.

(Apparently the Germans had reached the Noerdijk bridge, one of the most important in the country, connecting as it does the northern part of the country with the southern, by breaking through the Peel marsh system of defense to the west of the Maas river near the German frontier. They were reported then to have advanced in rapid stages by way of Tilburg and Hertogenbosch.)

The 59-year old Netherlands Monarch fled to Great Britain aboard a British warship several hours after her daughter, Crown Princess Juliana, and Juliana's two babies reached a haven in London. It was reported in London that fear of a "fifth column" attempt to kidnap the royal family prompted the flight from the war-ridden country.

(In London, a statement issued by the Dutch legation said German planes had started bombing Queen Wilhelmina's residence before she was persuaded to go to London. It added that the Germans also were trying to capture the queen.)

A proclamation broadcast by the commander-in-chief of the Dutch forces from Hilversum announced the transfer of the seat of the government in order to maintain its complete freedom of action.

The Dutch, their ire aroused by

Holland, Belgium Given Right To Cash Resources

Sec. Morgenthau Grants Blanket Exemptions to Two Nations

Washington, May 13 (AP)—The United States today made available to Holland and Belgium their large cash resources in the United States for the purchase of defense weapons and other purposes.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau granted blanket exemptions to the governments of Belgium and the Netherlands from President Roosevelt's order last Friday prohibiting any withdrawals of Dutch or Belgian funds from the United States without treasury licenses.

Morganthau's action left the president's order in effect as applied to citizens and business firms of the two countries, except for four banks and trading companies in The Netherland East Indies, for which blanket exemptions also were granted.

Both Need Funds

Officials indicated that envoys of Holland and Belgium had told the treasury that their governments needed their funds. Besides defense needs, the Dutch minister in Washington has been planning to act as paymaster for other Dutch officials abroad.

No figures on the governmental deposits of the two countries were available, but Morgenthau's order

Dutch Leave Italy as Fascists Parade and Urge War on Allies

Rome, May 13. (AP)—Large numbers of Dutch citizens were reported leaving Italy tonight as demonstrations throughout Italy against Britain and France fanned a new Mediterranean crisis.

Some of the Netherlands citizens were leaving for France. Some said they were leaving after consulting the Netherlands legation.

Many Scandinavians also left Italy previously, at the time of the invasions of Denmark and Norway.

Troops were posted around the British and French embassies in Rome but their intervention was not necessary. A few police were able to divert the columns of well-disciplined Fascist students marching in the main streets of Rome and crying "down with England" and for war.

Italy moved to bolster her airplane fortifications.

Some Italian sources said additional reservists had been called up

The Dutch high command acknowledged in a communique tonight that the Germans had succeeded in taking "a small sector of the Grebbe line," their main water defense system running south of the Zuider Zee to the Rhine, and that although Netherlands troops by fierce fighting had retaken the sector they could not hold it when the Germans launched fresh attacks.

(The Germans have reported penetrating this line between Amersfoort and Rhenen, about thirty-five miles east of Amsterdam.)

To the south, the high command acknowledged that Germans with motorized equipment had raced through the Langstraat (south of the Maas river) and had reached and passed the Moerdijk bridge which crosses the Maas but fifteen miles south of Rotterdam.

In Rotterdam itself, German parachute and transport-landed troops were admitted still to be holding out "stubbornly."

Nazis Hold Northeast

Moreover, the Germans were acknowledged to be in possession of most of the northeast provinces and to have reached the east coast of the Zuider Zee, that great tongue of the North Sea which has turned partly to fresh water because of Dutch dykes.

From there, the Germans threatened the huge dam at the mouth of the Zuider Zee, for a march south on Amsterdam. The dam! however, is strongly defended.

The radio station at Helversum announced the decision to transfer the government to an undisclosed place.

(Apparently the Germans had reached the Noerdijk bridge, one of the most important in the country, connecting as it does the northern part of the country with the southern, by breaking through the Peel marsh system of defense to the west of the Maas river near the German frontier. They were reported then to have advanced in rapid stages by way of Tilburg and Hertogenbosch.)

The 59-year old Netherlands Monarch fled to Great Britain aboard a British warship several hours after her daughter, Crown Princess Juliana, and Juliana's two babies reached a haven in London. It was reported in London that fear of a "fifth column" attempt to kidnap the royal family prompted the flight from the war-ridden country.

(In London, a statement issued by the Dutch legation said German planes had started bombing Queen Wilhelmina's residence before she was persuaded to go to London. It added that the Germans also were trying to capture the queen.)

A proclamation broadcast by the commander-in-chief of the Dutch forces from Hilversum announced the transfer of the seat of the government in order to maintain its complete freedom of action.

Holland, Belgium Given Right To Cash Resources

Sec. Morgenthau Grants Blanket Exemptions to Two Nations

Washington, May 13 (AP)—The United States today made available to Holland and Belgium their large cash resources in the United States for the purchase of defense weapons and other purposes.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau granted blanket exemptions to the governments of Belgium and the Netherlands from President Roosevelt's order last Friday prohibiting any withdrawals of Dutch or Belgian funds from the United States without treasury licenses.

Morganthau's action left the president's order in effect as applied to citizens and business firms of the two countries, except for four banks and trading companies in The Netherland East Indies, for which blanket exemptions also were granted.

Both Need Funds

Officials indicated that envoys of Holland and Belgium had told the treasury that their governments needed their funds. Besides defense needs, the Dutch minister in Washington has been planning to act as paymaster for other Dutch officials abroad.

No figures on the governmental deposits of the two countries were available, but Morgenthau's order

Dutch Leave Italy as Fascists Parade and Urge War on Allies

Rome, May 13. (AP)—Large numbers of Dutch citizens were reported leaving Italy tonight as demonstrations throughout Italy against Britain and France fanned a new Mediterranean crisis.

Some of the Netherlands citizens were leaving for France. Some said they were leaving after consulting the Netherlands legation.

Many Scandinavians also left Italy previously, at the time of the invasions of Denmark and Norway.

Troops were posted around the British and French embassies in Rome but their intervention was not necessary. A few police were able to divert the columns of well-disciplined Fascist students marching in the main streets of Rome and crying "down with England" and for war.

Churchill Pledges Allied Victory in Spite of Terrors

New War Leader Gets Unanimous Support of Parliament

By EDWIN STOUT

London, May 13 (AP) — Great Britain braced herself tonight for the "blood, toil, tears and sweat" of battle under the command of the Prime Minister Winston Churchill, who pledged "victory at all costs—victory in spite of all terrors."

While the new leader won unanimous votes of confidence in the House of Lords and the Commons, British troops went into action in the low countries against the Nazi invaders, British warships bombarded German air troops on the lowlands coast, and British planes attacked German communication lines.

With fierce fighting under way in the homeland and refugees streaming from Holland and Belgium, the Dutch royal family sought sanctuary in London.

Crown Princess Arrives

First to come today were Crown Princess Juliana, her two baby daughters and her consort, Prince Bernhard.

Then, tonight, Queen Wilhelmina arrived.

The 59-year-old refugee queen was met personally by King George VI at Liverpool station. The king clasped the queen's hands and kissed her on both cheeks.

The queen came to England on a British warship. It was believed among the reasons she fled her country were reported plots by a "fifth column" to kidnap the royal family.

Perhaps indicative of hard times to come for Britain, an authoritative source warned the folks at home not to be disheartened when they "hear of certain withdrawals." This source declared the Germans apparently are staking "almost everything in an attempt to win the war quickly."

Commons Votes Confidence

Commons voted unanimous confidence—381 to 0—in Churchill's stream-lined government after he told the members that nation's manpower was in "the preliminary phases of one of the greatest battles in history."

He, too, warned of grave times to come, but said he was leading the nation with "buoyance and hope."

Churchill sent the members home until May 21 with the statement that "at the present time, we are in a very great battle and I do not know what the position will be when we meet again."

has compelled other nations—even those most sincerely devoted to the cause of peace under a rule of law, including our own—to increase to immense proportions their own armaments."

Officials said he was referring to German "fifth column" activities, parachutists and subterfuges when he added: "peaceful nations have been deprived of their independence by the use of armed force o therat of force, combined with the exercise of fraud and treachery. Conquered populations have been subjected to new refinements of oppression and cruelty."

Hull summed up his views as to the present situation of the world by saying:

Anarchy Looms

"The specter of a new descent into the conditions of international anarchy which characterized the dark ages looms on the horizon today. I am profoundly convinced that it menaces the civilized existence of mankind—of every nation and of every individual. Every nation and every individual should be actively on guard."

Consequently, he said, "we have no choice but to expand our program of armament construction to a degree necessary to provide fully adequate means of defending this country's security and its rightful interests."

But he added that, "if mankind is to avoid a long-continuing period of chaos and retrogression, it can only be through the firm establishment of order under law. Never before has there been a greater need for our people to place the support of a wholly united public opinion behind our nation's efforts to exert the great weight of its moral influence in favor of a revindication and revitalization of the basic principles of order under law, which alone can give lasting assurance of safety, security and peace."

to reinforce the 1,250,000 men already under arms but authorities would not comment on the ground that the query involved military information.

However, authorities confirmed that Premier Mussolini had ordered further strengthening of the "Littorio Line" of fortifications along the French frontier.

Observers generally regarded both the "crisis" and demonstrations as artificially staged to divert the attention of the Allies while Germany attempts to crash through Belgium and the Netherlands and defeat the Allies in France.

Student demonstrations, some led or addressed by local Fascist leaders, were active in Bologna, Florence, Naples, Mussolini's boyhood home of Forli and other cities.

Rome Officials Silent

Rome official quarters would not comment on reports from Belgrade that Yugoslavia and Greece feared for their safety should Italy enter the war on Germany's side, reiterating only that Yugoslavia's security from Italian attack had been asserted repeatedly.

A side issue of the crisis was friction between Fascists and the Vatican. Mussolini today again gave his approval to the works of a pre-Fascist author which are on the church's forbidden list.

Detectives stationed at the Vatican City gates were reported to have been reinforced without apparent reason.

This view of desolation centers around the old church of Namsos Norway, showing it and the surrounding area in ruins. The church was only a shell after the German aerial bombardment during the last week of April. Commons as he called out for "victory at all costs—victory in spite of all terrors," and promised "to wage war by land, sea and air—war with all our might and all the strength God can give us."

The air ministry gave emphasis to his words, announcing that forty more German planes had been destroyed yesterday "at very small cost," and boosting to 135 the toll of German planes taken by the British alone since Germany invaded the low countries Friday.

The French put the three and a half day total of destroyed German planes in France and the lowlands at 400 or more.

The Germans put their day's plane losses at thirty-one and said they destroyed 328 Allied aircraft Sunday to push their tabulation past 700.

The quarrel over the German air corps' use of daredevil parachute troops in mass drops behind the lines drew a French order that they be shot summarily if not clearly identified by uniforms as combatants.

For every such case, ten Allied soldiers will be killed, the Germans thundered in rebuttal, insisting that their men were clearly uniformed in clothing adapted to their duties.

Under international law, combatants must be in uniform, but the German parachutists' coverall suits are something new in the way of military outfits.

France reported the Rhine front comparatively quiet after three days of heavy attacks on the Maginot line, but Swiss reports credited the French with partial destruction of a vital railway tunnel leading to Germany's Siegfried line and under the German "Gibraltar of the Rhine," near the Swiss border.

The Swiss anxiously manned their own defense lines for fear the Germans might try to push into France around that flank. A German smash through Geneva, said foreign military observers, might bring the Germans out into France's Rhone valley and into a good spot to persuade their Italian friends to leap into the fray.

Italy still sits on the sidelines. The Italian anti-British campaign proceeded last night, however, with numerous "incidents" among civilians. Large numbers of Dutch citizens were reported leaving Italy.

Not sure as to Italy's intentions, Yugoslavia put 700,000 men on military duty and guarded frontier and seashore alike.

Even Egypt, where the Allies have concentrated ships and men, got ready for any emergency by removing people from border desert villages, while a desert sandstorm slapped at the ships in Alexandria roadstead.

Watching the European war scene, President Roosevelt was reported planning to ask the United States Congress for additional defense appropriations, possibly $500,000,000 on top of the $2,000,000,000 already pending for the next fiscal year.

The United States decided to turn down an Argentine proposition that the Americans nations take up a "non-belligerent" attitude toward the European war instead of the present neutrality but gave the Belgian and Netherlands governments license to withdraw their own funds in this country, a broad exemption from the President's fund-freezing order of last week.

War Makes Plans Of Third Termers Less Difficult

Declare European Situation Makes FDR's Services Needed

Washington, May 13, (AP) — The increased acuteness of the European crisis was regarded by some politicians today as having simplified the principal problem of the third-term supporters—that of convincing Mr. Roosevelt he should run again. So far as can be seen now, they have arranged things so that he can have the Democratic nomination without serious opposition, but there has been no word from Mr. Roosevelt as to whether he would accept.

The President has made clear his own view the Nazi invasion of Holland and Belgium has intensified a situation which could in the end prove extremely harmful to the United States. He did so in his address Friday night to the Eighth American Scientific Congress.

Roosevelt's Position

The third termers are expected to point to the seriousness of the situation as an argument why the President should run. In turn, Republicans and other anti-Roosevelt men are preparing to argue just the reverse—that world conditions call for a new hand at the helm.

Considering the effect of war developments on domestic politics, Washington also was watching the unfolding pre-convention campaign.

Ohio tomorrow will hold its regular presidential primary, with the result known in advance. A Republican delegation of fifty-two will be elected pledged to Senator Taft (R.-O.) who has no opposition in the election. At the same time, the Democratic delegation will be instructed for Charles Sawyer, state Democratic leader, who is ready at any time to turn his delegates over to the third term movement.

West Va. Votes Today

West Virginia also will vote tomorrow, with no major entrants in its presidential primaries. The delegations to both conventions will be uninstructed with both Taft supporters and the backers of Thomas E. Dewey claiming portions of the Republican group, and the third termers claiming the Democratic delegation.

Only today, the third term movement obtained a powerful ally. Mayor LaGuardia of New York, addressing a convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers (CIO) announced that "if Franklin Roosevelt runs (for a third term) I am going to vote for him."

Roosevelt Acts

Mr. Roosevelt's round of conferences today on the augmented defense program coincided with four other important developments:

1. An allied spokesman announced that England and France had bought about $350,000,000 worth of American airplanes and airplane motors within the last four weeks.

2. The question whether the United States should grant credits to the Allies reached the House floor.

3. President Roosevelt asked Congress to make $2,900,000 available immediately for the construction of seacoast defences in Puerto Rico, and to grant the treasury an additional $12,500,000 for the purchase of stragetic and critical defense materials in the next fiscal year.

4. The war department estimated that 310,000 officers and men of the regular army, National Guard and reserve corps would be under arms during August maneuvers. Officials said this would be a record number for peace-time training.

Loans to the French, English and Belgium governments are now forbidden by the Johnson act, which outlaws advances to debt-defaulting nations, and credits to all of the belligerent governments are barred by the Neutrality act.

the activities of traitors within their defense lines, arrested 300 persons today in a "fifth column" mop-up in Amsterdam. That brought to 900 the total of suspected persons arrested since the war began for Holland four days ago.

Although Amsterdam was quiet tonight, truck loads of military police and soldiers rode through the streets with rifles ready to fire.

The Germans were spread along the outer fringe of Dutch provinces from the coast on the northeast to the Belgian frontier in the south like a great hand ready to crush a shell.

Holland's high command acknowledged that the Germans were driving through the border tier of provinces—Groningen, Drente, Overijsel and Gelderland.

It admitted they had speared into the interior in North Brabant province and reached the North Sea coast and the Ijsselmeer (Zuider Zee) at some points on the Eastern shore on a drive through Friesland province.

(The German high command declared that Nazi forces had occupied all of Groningen province and had spread everywhere on the east shore of the Ijsselmeer.)

Retreat Planned

But the Dutch said they had retreated within their defense positions according to plan and with small losses. They said they had fought merely a retarding action in the northern provinces, where there are no defense lines.

At some places in western Gelderland province, Nazi forces have penetrated to Dutch positions protected by inundations, the high command announced.

This indicated that fighting had begun along the Grebbe water line—the first main water defense for the so-called stronghold of Holland, the most populous area in which are Amsterdam, the Hague and Rotterdam.

Grebbe line extends south from the Ijsselmeer to the big rivers which cut east and west through the middle of Holland. Backed up by many fortifications, it forms the Dutch bulwark east of the main inundation defenses through Utrecht province.

Germans Advancing

South of the rivers, mechanized German units were reported by the communique to have pushed almost half way through north Brabant province, which borders Belgium, to the Lanstraat region north of Tilburg.

Intense German air activity was reported in Brabant, where the Dutch were supported by French forces.

Small detachments of Germans still held out in the southern part of Rotterdam, but the Dutch dominated most of the port city which the Nazis tried to seize at the outset of their invasion four days ago by dropping parachute troops.

(The German high command declared that parachute soldiers in Rotterdam had established contact with the main German land forces.)

Waalhaven airport near Rotterdam admittedly still is in German hands but the Dutch said it was under artillery bombardment and air attack by British planes.

refugees from The Netherlands and Belgium trying to get out of war's way.

Refugees arriving by rail in Paris told how their trains had been strafed by German planes. At least 800 came into the Paris north station, all wearing special arm bands and under the supervision of Belgian and French officers.

Meanwhile, official spokesmen warning the public to be on the lookout for German parachute troops which might attempt "fifth colum" activities in France, said this country has not intention of relenting on a decision to shoot all such troops found in French territory who are not wearing the regular German uniform.

Northern France had five air raid alarms today, while Paris had three.

Owsley Warns of Peril to U. S. If Hitler Wins War

Minister to Denmark Says We Would Be in Danger from Canada

Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., May 13 (AP)—Alvin Mansfield Owsley, United States Minister to Denmark, declared here today that "the obligation of America is to become so strong that this mad dog of Europe would not dare to lay his hands against the sovereignty of the U. S."

If Hitler wins the war, Owsley said, "he will dominate the seas, dictate the sea lanes, dictate the ports of Europe, dictate the amount of business this nation will do with Europe." He spoke at the annual conference of Wisconsin and upper Michigan Rotarians.

A wave of Central and South American revolutions would follow a German victory, the minister predicted. "There would be a succession of new governments there, Nazi in character."

"Canada also would be dominated by Germany," he said. "Do you want to live next door then, to a Canada that lies north of 3,000 miles of unfortified border? If Germany wins, you might as well get ready to defend that 3,000 miles."

"We must arouse the land to be certain we are not taken off guard."

Four Killed in Motor Car Crash

Annapolis, Md., May 13, (AP)—Four young people were killed today when their automobile collided head-on with a milk truck near the crest of Beaver Dam hill on the Solomons Island road nine miles south of here.

Killed were Frances Feritta, Annapolis and Gloria Carson, Best Gate, Anne Arundel county, both about 15, and Raymond Brashears, 19, Camp Parole, and Raymond Frank Seeger, 18, Eastport.

The girls, students at Annapolis high school, and their escorts were identified by Dr. Howard A. Kinhart, school principal.

John Lowman of Annapolis, driver of the milk truck, was released under $1,000 bond pending hearing on four charges of manslaughter. He was treated for bruises and lacerations.

Lowman told county police officer William A. Stallings that he was returning to Annapolis with a load of milk when the two vehicles met head-on at the hill. John Jones, a negro riding with Lowman, was thrown out of the truck cab by the impact but not injured seriously.

Miss Feritta and the two youths received broken necks and multiple fractures and bruises, and Miss Carson died of a skull fracture. The young men were thrown clear of the car, which overturned and was virtually broken in two by the force of the crash. It was necessary to lift the wreckage to remove the bodies of the girls.

With British and French troops alongside the Belgians in the front lines, optimism appeared buoyed after the first impact of the Nazi Blitzkrieg offensive and experienced observers here said the outcome still was in the balance.

(In Paris, a French war ministry spokesman acknowledged tonight that Allied forces were falling back deliberately both in Belgium and Holland before German land and air attacks.

(He declared the Allies have erected a "wall on which the great battle will be fought," leaving the implication they were attempting to choose their own battleground.

(In Belgium, he said, French and Belgian troops were withdrawing to the Meuse river in the face of blows by several divisions of Nazi infantry and motorized units.

(Notwithstanding the Nazi high command announcement that German troops had taken the citadel of the Liege fortress, a French survey of the situation conceded the Germans only the Eben Emael fortress in the vital Liege militarized zone.)

The joint British-French-Belgian command established an inter-allied censorship in Belguim.

As refugees streamed south and west from the fighting zones, United States Ambassador John Cudahy disclosed he was consulting with Belgian Red Cross officials.

He said the feeding and housing of the Belgian war homeless already was a tremendous job and funds were needed.

The Belgian government was prepared for flight itself, if necessary, but officials said that Brussels was in no immediate danger from land attack.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

A menacing Nazi attack through the low countries to cut Britain apart from France confronted England's new war captain, Winston Churchill, as he took command and warned his countrymen that they must expect nothing but "blood, toil, tears and sweat" for many months to come.

While he spoke to parliament, German forces in Holland and Belgium had gained footholds both north and south of the Dutch-Belbian frontier. A desperate race was on between Nazi invaders and British major forces to reach fronts of their own choosing for the fight.

There could be no doubt that Hitler had loosed the while might of the German war machine in a west front assault on a vaster scale than any action of World War days. The Nazi sweep into Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg covers a front of close to 300 miles. Yet the cutting edges of the stroke, as so far defined, indicates that the Germans aim, for one thing to obtain North Sea bases close to the English Channel, the Franco-British life-line.

England Faces Problem

Again Britain is faced wnth prospects of a "back-to-the-wall" battle to keep her enemy from severing her communications with France. This time, however, she has had months to make ready and has stout-fighting Allies in both Belgium and Holland to help her muster her defenses for a major battle.

London advices hint that the first critical test of strength will come along Belgium's water defense lines, already breached at Liege, and on the blood-drenched fields of Flanders in the Antwerp-Liege-Nemur triangle. Somewhere in that area the main British army is concentrating, fed by both rail and road from France and by sea from England direct.

Whether behind Germany's preliminary moves lies an expectation of repeating on a grander scale the world-war swing toward Paris via Belgium remains to be seen. Nazi pressure on the French front still seems to be designed to pin French forces there in a defensive role while the battle with the British in the low countries develops.

Even the German thrust in Central Holland seems a secondary operation as yet. There is no certain road for the invaders there to a North Sea frontage that could menace Franco-British cross-channel communication. Holland alone would not justify the German effort. And strong British forces landed on the Dutch coast are helping brace Dutch defenses and probably moving into the breach north of Antwerp between the Dutch and Belgian defensive systems.

Titantic Battle Impending

Churchill characterized the first four days of operations as mere "preliminaries" of a crucial struggle. Berlin agrees that a titantic battle is impending in the low countries. On its outcome, and the speed with which the foes can bring their heavy forces into action, may turn the whole course of the war.

Germany claims its forces have crashed into Liege's girdling fortification and seized the "citadel." If that claim should be borne out, it would be a blow to Allied hopes of meeting the main German attack along well-prepared Belgian defense positions. At best, however, such a German advance would represent a narrow wedge, subject to flank attack on both sides. It seems doubtful that Germany would dare push it much farther before the base of the salient at Liege had been widened extensively.

The initial impetus of the surprise attack has carried the Germans forward at far separated points in the low countries, but not fast enough to insure that the impending major struggles between Nazi and British forces will be battles of maneuver on open ground best suited for Germany's mechanized forces. Low country water defenses still dominate the battle as an imponderable factor in the outcome.

Hitler's Armies

chutists wore foreign uniforms or civilian clothes.

The first contact of German troops with French forces on Belgian soil, according to Berlin information, is expected to come south of Liege, where the French were reported moving up west of the Ourthe river.

On the Westwall-Maginot line front the high command reported German positions had been moved forward south and southeast of Zweibrucken, opposite the northern boundary of the French province of Lorraine, in an action in which DNB reported the Germans captured 600 Frenchmen.

May Attack Maginot Line

This raised the possibility of a frontal attack on the Maginot line at a place where the Germans would not have the additional handicap of a Rhine crossing, although it might have been a feint to keep enemy forces diverted from other sectors.

The Maginot line has not been mentioned in various communiques and what, if any, action is under way there is unknown here.

In other fields these developments were reported:

DNB said German mountain troops took 300 prisoners, mostly English, in a successful fight at Mo, north of Trondheim, Norway.

Claimed victories at sea included the sinking of a British cruiser by air bombs off Netherlands coast, damaging of another cruiser, sinking of four transports and a destroyer, and scoring hits on seven supply ships.

Germany's air losses yesterday were placed at thirty-one planes.

An authorized source said the military damage to German territory from enemy bombs was slight and there was no sign of air fighting in Berlin.

Concerning the progress in Belgium, the high command said:

Program in Belgium

"The crossing of the Albert canal was forced northwest of Hasselt, our troops are moving forward west of Liege and north of the Meuse and have broken into the city of Liege. The German flag has waved on the citadel since the forenoon of May 13, while individual outer forts still resist."

Hasselt is about forty miles east of Brussels and twenty miles Northwest of Liege. DNB said the breach in this main Belgian defense line was widening steadily.

Between it and Maastricht, above Liege on the Maas (or Meuse), crossings of the canal now are claimed in several places.

While Liege's defenses apparently were nearing subjection, DNB conceded that "the fortified zone is not definitely paralyzed as the enemy still is resisting in the eastern fortifications."

Eben Emael, outlying fort whose capture was reported Saturday, is about ten miles north of Liege, west of the Meuse, but nearer to Liege is a regular ring of forts through which the Germans apparently knifed to take the citadel on the very fringe of the city.

The progress there was at about the pace of the World War, when the sturdy resistance at Liege held up the Kaiser's armies long enough for the Allies to move their troops into position in France.

But today, as compared to twenty-six years ago, there was the prospect of a meeting of massed German and Allied armies long ahead of the days of the Marne.

In 1914 the Germans crossed the Belgian frontier on Aug. 4 and entered Liege four days later, although some of the efforts held out for more than a week.

Formidable Battle Imminent

An authorized source hinted that one of the most formidable battles of the war was imminent with the ground clash between Allied and German divisions accompanied by a battle of air armadas over Belgium.

Maps in German papers as well as high command reports indicated a furious battle was in prospect around the defense line from Namur, southwest of Liege, to Antwerp.

The pace to date has been faster in the Netherlands, where DNB said German occupation of Groningen province, in the north, had been completed when German forces advanced everywhere to the Zuider Zee (Ijsselmeer) and armored forces made contact with the parachutist invaders of Rotterdam.

The German drive in the lowland countries seemingly was following the historic Von Schieffen plan of a scythe-like sweep.

Germany's mysterious "secret weapon" still provoked head-scratching in Berlin.

Some were wondering now whether it simply was the use of parachute troops. To questions of how it was possible for a handful of parachutists to hold airports far behind the line of battle the only answers were conjectures that perhaps disaffected elements rallied to their aid.

"Bum's Rush" Given Rep. Sweeney, Two Declare in Suit

Elyria, O., May 13 (AP)—A New York newspaper man, in deposition records filed here today, testified Rep. Martin L. Sweeney (D-Ohio) was given "the bum's rush" a year ago by patrons of a Washington restaurant.

Statements of Lowell Limpus of the New York Daily News and Earnest Cuneo, New York lawyer, were taken at Washington Saturday in connection with Sweeney's $250,000 libel suit against publishers of the Elyria Chronicle-Telegram. Sweeney has sued nearly seventy newspapers publishing a capital column which he contends accused him of racial prejudice.

The New Yorkers said they and Sweeney were in the restaurant about May 17, 1939. They identified others present as Chairman Jerome Frank of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Misses Margaret Dowd, Freda Hannock and Sophie Nack.

"The —— damned Harvard Jews have taken over this town," Cuneo quoted Sweeney as saying. The witness said the Ohio Democrat appeared intoxicated. Limpus deposed Sweeney commented on sex propensities of girls of different races, identified a woman present as Jewish and made a remark to her.

Limpus said the Cleveland Congressman "pushed her with his open hand. Then we gave him the bum's rush."

Hitler Decorates Capturers of Fort

Berlin, May 13 (AP)—The "incomparable daring" of eight Nazi air force officers in capturing the new Belgian fortress Eben Emael at Liege and certain bridges over the Albert canal today won for them the Knight's cross of the Iron Cross, personally bestowed by Adolf Hitler.

The recipients included a captain Koch, promoted to major; a Lieutenant Witzig, who was made a captain, and two other lieutenants who were wounded but received their decorations by proxy.

First reports said Eben Emael was taken with a secret weapon after Witzig landed his plane in the fortifications.

Churchill Pledges Allied Victory in Spite of Terrors

By EDWIN STOUT

London, May 13 (AP) — Great Britain braced herself tonight for the "blood, toil, tears and sweat" of battle under the command of the Prime Minister Winston Churchill, who pledged "victory at all costs—victory in spite of all terrors."

While the new leader won unanimous votes of confidence in the House of Lords and the Commons, British troops went into action in the low countries against the Nazi invaders. British warships bombarded German air troops on the lowlands coast, and British planes attacked German communication lines.

With fierce fighting under way in the homeland and refugees streaming from Holland and Belgium, the Dutch royal family sought sanctuary in London.

Crown Princess Arrives

First to come today were Crown Princess Juliana, her two baby daughters and her consort, Prince Bernhard.

Then, tonight, Queen Wilhelmina arrived.

The 59-year-old refugee queen was met personally by King George VI at Liverpool station. The king clasped the queen's hands and kissed her on both cheeks.

The queen came to England on a British warship. It was believed among the reasons she fled her country were reported plots by a "fifth column" to kidnap the royal family.

Perhaps indicative of hard times to come for Britain, an authoritative source warned the folks at home not to be disheartened when they "hear of certain withdrawals." This source declared the Germans apparently are staking "almost everything in an attempt to win the war quickly."

Commons Votes Confidence

Commons voted unanimous confidence—381 to 0—in Churchill's stream-lined government after he told the members that nation's manpower was in "the preliminary phases of one of the greatest battles in history."

He, too, warned of grave times to come, but said he was leading the nation with "buoyance and hope."

Churchill sent the members home until May 21 with the statement that "at the present time, we are in a very great battle and I do not know what the position will be when we meet again."

Return to Dark

has compelled other nations—even those most sincerely devoted to the cause of peace under a rule of law, including our own—to increase to immense proportions their own armaments."

Officials said he was referring to German "fifth column" activities, parachutists and subterfuges when he added: "peaceful nations have been deprived of their independence by the use of armed force o therat of force, combined with the exercise of fraud and treachery. Conquered populations have been subjected to new refinements of oppression and cruelty."

Hull summed up his views as to the present situation of the world by saying:

Anarchy Looms

"The specter of a new descent into the conditions of international anarchy which characterized the dark ages looms on the horizon today. I am profoundly convinced that it menaces the civilized existence of mankind—of every nation and of every individual. Every nation and every individual should be actively on guard."

Consequently, he said, "we have no choice but to expand our program of armament construction to a degree necessary to provide fully adequate means of defending this country's security and its rightful interests."

But he added that, "if mankind is to avoid a long-continuing period of chaos and retrogression, it can only be through the firm establishment of order under law. Never before has there been a greater need for our people to place the support of a wholly united public opinion behind our nation's efforts to exert the great weight of its moral influence in favor of a revindication and revitalization of the basic principles of order under law, which alone can give lasting assurance of safety, security and peace."

Dutch Leave Italy

to reinforce the 1,250,000 men already under arms but authorities would not comment on the ground that the query involved military information.

However, authorities confirmed that Premier Mussolini had ordered further strengthening of the "Littorio Line" of fortifications along the French frontier.

Observers generally regarded both the "crisis" and demonstrations as artificially staged to divert the attention of the Allies while Germany attempts to crash through Belgium and the Netherlands and defeat the Allies in France.

Student demonstrations, some led or addressed by local Fascist leaders, were active in Bologna, Florence, Naples, Mussolini's boyhood home of Forli and other cities.

Rome Officials Silent

Rome official quarters would not comment on reports from Belgrade that Yugoslavia and Greece feared for their safety should Italy enter the war on Germany's side, reiterating only that Yugoslavia's security from Italian attack had been asserted repeatedly.

A side issue of the crisis was friction between Fascists and the Vatican. Mussolini today again gave his approval to the works of a pre-Fascist author which are on the church's forbidden list.

Detectives stationed at the Vatican City gates were reported to have been reinforced without apparent reason.

AFTER THE NAZI WARBIRDS PASSED OVER

Pushed Back

Commons as he called out for "victory at all costs—victory in spite of all terrors," and promised "to wage war by land, sea and air—war with all our might and all the strength God can give us."

The air ministry gave emphasis to his words, announcing that forty more German planes had been destroyed yesterday "at very small cost," and boosting to 135 the toll of German planes taken by the British alone since Germany invaded the low countries Friday.

The French put the three and a half day total of destroyed German planes in France and the lowlands at 400 or more.

The Germans put their day's plane losses at thirty-one and said they destroyed 328 Allied aircraft Sunday to push their tabulation past 700.

The quarrel over the German air corps' use of daredevil parachute troops in mass drops behind the lines drew a French order that they be shot summarily if not clearly identified by uniforms as combatants.

For every such case, ten Allied soldiers will be killed, the Germans thundered in rebuttal, insisting that their men were clearly uniformed in clothing adapted to their duties.

Under international law, combatants must be in uniform, but the German parachutists' coverall suits are something new in the way of military outfits.

France reported the Rhine front comparatively quiet after three days of heavy attacks on the Maginot line, but Swiss reports credited the French with partial destruction of a vital railway tunnel leading to Germany's Siegfried line and under the German "Gibraltar of the Rhine," near the Swiss border.

The Swiss anxiously manned their own defense lines for fear the Germans might try to push into France around that flank. A German smash through Geneva, said foreign military observers, might bring the Germans out into France's Rhone valley and into a good spot to persuade their Italian friends to leap into the fray.

Italy still sits on the sidelines. The Italian anti-British campaign proceeded last night, however, with numerous "incidents" among civilians. Large numbers of Dutch citizens were reported leaving Italy.

Not sure as to Italy's intentions, Yugoslavia put 700,000 men on military duty and guarded frontier and seashore alike.

Even Egypt, where the Allies have concentrated ships and men, got ready for any emergency by removing people from border desert villages, while a desert sandstorm slapped at the ships in Alexandria roadstead.

Watching the European war scene, President Roosevelt was reported planning to ask the United States Congress for additional defense appropriations, possibly $500,000,000 on top of the $2,000,000,000 already pending for the next fiscal year.

The United States decided to turn down an Argentine proposition that the Americans nations take up a "non-belligerent" attitude toward the European war instead of the present neutrality but gave the Belgian and Netherlands governments license to withdraw their own funds in this country, a broad exemption from the President's fund-freezing order of last week.

War Makes Plans Of Third Termers Less Difficult

Declare European Situation Makes FDR's Services Needed

Washington, May 13, (AP) — The increased acuteness of the European crisis was regarded by some politicians today as having simplified the principal problem of the third-term supporters—that of convincing Mr. Roosevelt he should run again. So far as can be seen now, they have arranged things so that he can have the Democratic nomination without serious opposition, but there has been no word from Mr. Roosevelt as to whether he would accept.

The President has made clear his own view the Nazi invasion of Holland and Belgium has intensified a situation which could in the end prove extremely harmful to the United States. He did so in his address Friday night to the Eighth American Scientific Congress.

Roosevelt's Position

The third termers are expected to point to the seriousness of the situation as an argument why the President should run. In turn, Republicans and other anti-Roosevelt men are preparing to argue just the reverse—that world conditions call for a new hand at the helm.

Considering the effect of war developments on domestic politics, Washington also was watching the unfolding pre-convention campaign.

Ohio tomorrow will hold its regular presidential primary, with the result known in advance. A Republican delegation of fifty-two will be elected pledged to Senator Taft (R.-O.) who has no opposition in the election. At the same time, the Democratic delegation will be instructed for Charles Sawyer, state Democratic leader, who is ready at any time to turn his delegates over to the third term movement.

West Va. Votes Today

West Virginia also will vote tomorrow, with no major entrants in its presidential primaries. The delegations to both conventions will be uninstructed with both Taft supporters and the backers of Thomas E. Dewey claiming portions of the Republican group, and the third termers claiming the Democratic delegation.

Only today, the third term movement obtained a powerful ally, Mayor LaGuardia of New York, addressing a convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers (CIO) announced that "if Franklin Roosevelt runs (for a third term) I am going to vote for him."

Roosevelt Acts

Mr. Roosevelt's round of conferences today on the augmented defense program coincided with four other important developments:

1. An allied spokesman announced that England and France had bought about $350,000,000 worth of American airplanes and airplane motors within the last four weeks.
2. The question whether the United States should grant credits to the Allies reached the House floor.
3. President Roosevelt asked Congress to make $2,900,000 available immediately for the construction of seacoast defences in Puerto Rico, and to grant the treasury an additional $12,500,000 for the purchase of stragetic and critical defense materials in the next fiscal year.
4. The war department estimated that 310,000 officers and men of the regular army, National Guard and reserve corps would be under arms during August maneuvers. Officials said this would be a record number for peace-time training.

Loans to the French, English and Belgium governments are now forbidden by the Johnson act, which outlaws advances to debt-defaulting nations, and credits to all of the belligerent governments are barred by the Neutrality act.

Queen

the activities of traitors within their defense lines, arrested 300 persons today in a "fifth column" mop-up in Amsterdam. That brought to 900 the total of suspected persons arrested since the war began for Holland four days ago.

Although Amsterdam was quiet tonight, truck loads of military police and soldiers rode through the streets with rifles ready to fire.

The Germans were spread along the outer fringe of Dutch provinces from the coast on the northeast to the Belgian frontier in the south like a great hand ready to crush a shell.

Holland's high command acknowleged that the Germans were driving through the border tier of provinces—Groningen, Drente, Overijsel and Gelderland.

It admitted they had speared into the interior in North Brabant province and reached the North Sea coast and the Ijsselmeer (Zuider Zee) at some points on the Eastern shore on a drive through Friesland province.

(The German high command declared that Nazi forces had occupied all of Groningen province and had spread everywhere on the east shore of the Ijsselmeer.)

Retreat Planned

But the Dutch said they had retreated within their defense positions according to plan and with small losses. They said they had fought merely a retarding action in the northern provinces, where there are no defense lines.

At some places in western Gelderland province, Nazi forces have penetrated to Dutch positions protected by inundations, the high command announced.

This indicated that fighting had begun along the Grebbe water line—the first main water defense for the so-called stronghold of Holland, the most populous area in which are Amsterdam, the Hague and Rotterdam.

Grebbe line extends south from the Ijsselmeer to the big rivers which cut east and west through the middle of Holland. Backed up by many fortifications, it forms the Dutch bulwark east of the main inundation defenses through Utrecht province.

Germans Advancing

South of the rivers, mechanized German units were reported by the communique to have pushed almost half way through north Brabant province, which borders Belgium, to the Lanstraat region north of Tilburg.

Intense German air activity was reported in Brabant, where the Dutch were supported by French forces.

Small detachments of Germans still held out in the southern part of Rotterdam, but the Dutch dominated most of the port city which the Nazis tried to seize at the outset of their invasion four days ago by dropping parachute troops.

(The German high command declared that parachute soldiers in Rotterdam had established contact with the main German land forces.)

Waalhaven airport near Rotterdam admittedly still is in German hands but the Dutch said it was under artillery bombardment and air attack by British planes.

refugees from The Netherlands and Belgium trying to get out of war's way.

Refugees arriving by rail in Paris told how their trains had been strafed by German planes. At least 800 came into the Paris north station, all wearing special arm bands and under the supervision of Belgian and French officers.

Meanwhile, official spokesmen warning the public to be on the lookout for German parachute troops which might attempt "fifth colum" activities in France, said this country has not intention of relenting on a decision to shoot all such troops found in French territory who are not wearing the regular German uniform.

Northern France had five air raid alarms today, while Paris had three.

Minister to Denmark Says We Would Be in Danger from Canada

Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., May 13 (AP)—Alvin Mansfield Owsley, United States Minister to Denmark, declared here today that "the obligation of America is to become so strong that this mad dog of Europe would not dare to lay his hands against the sovereignty of the U. S."

If Hitler wins the war, Owsley said, "he will dominate the seas, dictate the sea lanes, dictate the ports of Europe, dictate the amount of business this nation will do with Europe." He spoke at the annual conference of Wisconsin and upper Michigan Rotarians.

A wave of Central and South American revolutions would follow a German victory, the minister predicted. "There would be a succession of new governments there, Nazi in character."

"Canada also would be dominated by Germany," he said. "Do you want to live next door then, to a Canada that lies north of 3,000 miles of unfortified border? If Germany wins, you might as well get ready to defend that 3,000 miles."

"We must arouse the land to be certain we are not taken off guard."

Four Killed in Motor Car Crash

Annapolis, Md., May 13. (AP)—Four young people were killed today when their automobile collided head-on with a milk truck near the crest of Beaver Dam hill on the Solomons Island road nine miles south of here.

Killed were Frances Feritta, Annapolis and Gloria Carson, Best Gate, Anne Arundel county, both about 15, and Raymond Brashears, 19, Camp Parole, and Raymond Frank Seeger, 18, Eastport.

The girls, students at Annapolis high school, and their escorts were identified by Dr. Howard A. Kinhart, school principal.

John Lowman of Annapolis, driver of the milk truck, was released under $1,000 bond pending hearing on four charges of manslaughter. He was treated for bruises and lacerations.

Lowman told county police officer William A. Stallings that he was returning to Annapolis with a load of milk when the two vehicles met head-on at the hill. John Jones, a negro riding with Lowman, was thrown out of the truck cab by the impact but not injured seriously.

Miss Feritta and the two youths received broken necks and multiple fractures and bruises, and Miss Carson died of a skull fracture. The young men were thrown clear of the car, which overturned and was virtually broken in two by the force of the crash. It was necessary to lift the wreckage to remove the bodies of the girls.

tails on the outcome of today's assaults.

With British and French troops alongside the Belgians in the front lines, optimism appeared buoyed after the first impact of the Nazi Blitzkrieg offensive and experienced observers here said the outcome still was in the balance.

(In Paris, a French war ministry spokesman acknowledged tonight that Allied forces were falling back deliberately both in Belgium and Holland before German land and air attacks.

(He declared the Allies have erected a "wall on which the great battle will be fought," leaving the implication they were attempting to choose their own battleground.

(In Belgium, he said, French and Belgian troops were withdrawing to the Meuse river in the face of blows by several divisions of Nazi infantry and motorized units.

(Notwithstanding the Nazi high command announcement that German troops had taken the citadel of the Liege fortress, a French survey of the situation conceded the Germans only the Eben Emael fortress in the vital Liege militarized zone.)

The joint British-French-Belgian command established an inter-allied censorship in Belguim.

As refugees streamed south and west from the fighting zones, United States Ambassador John Cudahy disclosed he was consulting with Belgian Red Cross officials.

He said the feeding and housing of the Belgian war homeless already was a tremendous job and funds were needed.

The Belgian government was prepared for flight itself, if necessary, but officials said that Brussels was in no immediate danger from land attack.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

A menacing Nazi attack through the low countries to cut Britain apart from France confronted England's new war captain, Winston Churchill, as he took command and warned his countrymen that they must expect nothing but "blood, toil, tears and sweat" for many months to come.

While he spoke to parliament, German forces in Holland and Belgium had gained footholds both north and south of the Dutch-Belbian frontier. A desperate race was on between Nazi invaders and British major forces to reach fronts of their own choosing for the fight.

There could be no doubt that Hitler had loosed the while might of the German war machine in a west front assault on a vaster scale than any action of World War days. The Nazi sweep into Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg covers a front of close to 300 miles. Yet the cutting edges of the stroke, as so far defined, indicates that the Germans aim, for one thing to obtain North Sea bases close to the English Channel, the Franco-British life-line.

England Faces Problem

Again Britain is faced wnth prospects of a "back-to-the-wall" battle to keep her enemy from severing her communications with France. This time, however, she has had months to make ready and has stout-fighting Allies in both Belgium and Holland to help her muster her defenses for a major battle.

London advices hint that the first critical test of strength will come along Belgium's water defense lines, already breached at Liege, and on the blood-drenched fields of Flanders in the Antwerp-Liege-Nemur triangle. Somewhere in that area the main British army is concentrating, fed by both rail and road from France and by sea from England direct.

Whether behind Germany's preliminary moves lies an expectation of repeating on a grander scale the world-war swing toward Paris via Belgium remains to be seen. Nazi pressure on the French front still seems to be designed to pin French forces there in a defensive role while the battle with the British in the low countries develops.

Even the German thrust in Central Holland seems a secondary operation as yet. There is no certain road for the invaders there to a North Sea frontage that could menace Franco-British cross-channel communication. Holland alone would not justify the German effort. And strong British forces landed on the Dutch coast are helping brace Dutch defenses and probably moving into the breach north of Antwerp between the Dutch and Belgian defensive systems.

Titantic Battle Impending

Churchill characterized the first four days of operations as mere "preliminaries" of a crucial struggle. Berlin agrees that a titantic battle is impending in the low countries. On its outcome, and the speed with which the foes can bring their heavy forces into action, may turn the whole course of the war.

Germany claims its forces have crashed into Liege's girdling fortification and seized the "citadel." If that claim should be borne out, it would be a blow to Allied hopes of meeting the main German attack along well-prepared Belgian defense positions. At best, however, such a German advance would represent a narrow wedge, subject to flank attack on both sides. It seems doubtful that Germany would dare push it much farther before the base of the salient at Liege had been widened extensively.

The initial impetus of the surprise attack has carried the Germans forward at far separated points in the low countries, but not fast enough to insure that the impending major struggles between Nazi and British forces will be battles of maneuver on open ground best suited for Germany's mechanized forces. Low country water defenses still dominate the battle as an imponderable factor in the outcome.

Hitler's Armies

chutists wore foreign uniforms or civilian clothes.

The first contact of German troops with French forces on Belgian soil, according to Berlin information, is expected to come south of Liege, where the French were reported moving up west of the Ourthe river.

On the Westwall-Maginot line front the high command reported German positions had been moved forward south and southeast of Zweibrucken, opposite the northern boundary of the French province of Lorraine, in an action in which DNB reported the Germans captured 600 Frenchmen.

May Attack Maginot Line

This raised the possibility of a frontal attack on the Maginot line at a place where the Germans would not have the additional handicap of a Rhine crossing, although it might have been a feint to keep enemy forces diverted from other sectors.

The Maginot line has not been mentioned in various communiques and what, if any, action is under way there is unknown here.

In other fields these developments were reported:

DNB said German mountain troops took 300 prisoners, mostly English, in a successful fight at Mo, north of Trondheim, Norway.

Claimed victories at sea included the sinking of a British cruiser by air bombs off Netherlands coast, damaging of another cruiser, sinking of four transports and a destroyer, and scoring hits on seven supply ships.

Germany's air losses yesterday were placed at thirty-one planes.

An authorized source said the military damage to German territory from enemy bombs was slight and there was no sign of air fighting in Berlin.

Concerning the progress in Belgium, the high command said:

Program in Belgium

"The crossing of the Albert canal was forced northwest of Hasselt, our troops are moving forward west of Liege and north of the Meuse and have broken into the city of Liege. The German flag has waved on the citadel since the forenoon of May 13, while individual outer forts still resist."

Hasselt is about forty miles east of Brussels and twenty miles Northwest of Liege. DNB said the breach in this main Belgian defense line was widening steadily.

Between it and Maastricht, above Liege on the Maas (or Meuse), crossings of the canal now are claimed in several places.

While Liege's defenses apparently were nearing subjection, DNB conceded that "the fortified zone is not definitely paralyzed as the enemy still is resisting in the eastern fortifications."

Eben Emael, outlying fort whose capture was reported Saturday, is about ten miles north of Liege, west of the Meuse, but nearer to Liege is a regular ring of forts through which the Germans apparently knifed to take the citadel on the very fringe of the city.

The progress there was at about the pace of the World War, when the sturdy resistance at Liege held up the Kaiser's armies long enough for the Allies to move their troops into position in France.

But today, as compared to twenty-six years ago, there was the prospect of a meeting of massed German and Allied armies long ahead of the days of the Marne.

In 1914 the Germans crossed the Belgian frontier on Aug. 4 and entered Liege four days later, although some of the efforts held out for more than a week.

Formidable Battle Imminent

An authorized source hinted that one of the most formidable battles of the war was imminent with the ground clash between Allied and German divisions accompanied by a battle of air armadas over Belgium.

Maps in German papers as well as high command reports indicated a furious battle was in prospect around the defense line from Namur, southwest of Liege, to Antwerp.

The pace to date has been faster in the Netherlands, where DNB said German occupation of Groningen province, in the north, had been completed when German forces advanced everywhere to the Zuider Zee (Ijsselmeer) and armored forces made contact with the parachutist invaders of Rotterdam.

The German drive in the lowland countries seemingly was following the historic Von Schieffen plan of a scythe-like sweep.

Germany's mysterious "secret weapon" still provoked head-scratching in Berlin.

Some were wondering now whether it simply was the use of parachute troops. To questions of how it was possible for a handful of parachutists to hold airports far behind the line of battle the only answers were conjectures that perhaps disaffected elements rallied to their aid.

"Bum's Rush" Given Rep. Sweeney, Two Declare in Suit

Elyria, O., May 13 (AP)—A New York newspaper man, in deposition records filed here today, testified Rep. Martin L. Sweeney (D-Ohio) was given "the bum's rush" a year ago by patrons of a Washington restaurant.

Statements of Lowell Limpus of the New York Daily News and Earnest Cuneo, New York lawyer, were taken at Washington Saturday in connection with Sweeney's $250,000 libel suit against publishers of the Elyria Chronicle-Telegram. Sweeney has sued nearly seventy newspapers publishing a capital column which he contends accused him of racial prejudice.

The New Yorkers said they and Sweeney were in the restaurant about May 17, 1939. They identified others present as Chairman Jerome Frank of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Misses Margaret Dowd, Freda Hannock and Sophie Nack.

"The —— damned Harvard Jews have taken over this town," Cuneo quoted Sweeney as saying. The witness said the Ohio Democrat appeared intoxicated. Limpus deposed Sweeney commented on sex propensities of girls of different races, identified a woman present as Jewish and made a remark to her.

Limpus said the Cleveland Congressman "pushed her with his open hand. Then we gave him the bum's rush."

Hitler Decorates Capturers of Fort

Berlin, May 13 (AP)—The "incomparable daring" of eight Nazi air force officers in capturing the new Belgian fortress Eben Emael at Liege and certain bridges over the Albert canal today won for them the Knight's cross of the Iron Cross, personally bestowed by Adolf Hitler.

The recipients included a captain Koch, promoted to major; a Lieutenant Witzig, who was made a captain, and two other lieutenants who were wounded but received their decorations by proxy.

First reports said Eben Emael was taken with a secret weapon after Witzig landed his plane in the fortifications.

Home and a Career—in the Chorus

Betty De Elmo as a mother

Betty at work

AP Feature Service

New York—One of the trim-and-twenty gals in the chorus of "Too Many Girls," George Abbott's long-run musical comedy, is Betty De Elmo. Betty is content to have a five-month-old baby instead of mink coats, a husband instead of stage-door admirers. Her baby is Cathy; her husband is Lanny Burton.

Betty enjoys her work in the chorus, but she also likes being a housewife. She keeps house and takes care of the baby herself.

Last Thanksgiving she took a leave from the show. Cathy was born on December 12. Betty returned to her place in the line February 3.

Her day starts at 9:30 a. m., when she feeds and bathes Cathy. Then she wheels Cathy a turn or two around the block. The other girls in the show often come around to watch and learn.

Betty gets home from work around midnight and wakes Cathy for her bottle. On matinee days Betty goes home between the afternoon and evening shows.

Her husband is connected with the house staff of the Alvin theater. He doesn't waste any time getting home after the shows.

Betty hails from Texas. Her father was a circus performer, specializing in animal acts, and her mother was a singer. So she comes by trouping naturally.

Darling Cartoon Impresses Need of a Cleaning

THAT is a timely cartoon by Jay N. Darling appearing today on this page, illustrating the reluctance of the New Dealers to effect the remedies they promised they would provide for mistakes they should make.

The cartoon has to do with the amendments to the Hatch act, by which its provisions for restricting federal employes from engaging in political activities would be extended to include state jobholders paid wholly or in part with federal funds.

As Wendell Willkie pointed out in an address the other day at St. Paul, the country "has been shocked by the brazen spectacle of some of our state organizations," including that of taking a percentage of official salaries. It has been shocked also by the spectacle of these government employes in turn using their powers to intimidate the voters. While the Hatch measures will not wholly solve this problem, they will at least contribute to a healthful cleansing of state politics.

The cartoon applies equally to the frantic fight the New Dealers are making against the Logan-Walters bill, which would provide relief through court appeal from the many injustices coming from the myriad of regulatory commissions, bureaus, agencies and other government bodies created by the New Deal, many of them under false pretenses. These groups have been endowed with vast undefined powers and their requirements are generally so costly that it is virtually impossible for the little businessman and smaller corporations to raise the money with which to meet them. Thus they are arbitrarily shut out of the picture.

As Willkie pointed out, you can elect your congressman, and you can have some check on him, which he realizes, as you can vote him out of office if he doesn't do the right and decent thing, but you do not elect your commissioner, in whom tremendous and practically unlimited powers are concentrated and whose job is secure.

This, as pointed out, is purely personal government, the oldest form of government in the world—reactionary in the full sense—and business cannot operate successfully under a personal form of government. It is high time, indeed, that we return from this sort of government to a government of just laws.

Installment Plan Extends To Railroad Travel

DICTATOR NATIONS have various Plans, but only the United States has the Installment Plan.

Buying on credit is an American institution. Americans may not have invented it, but they certainly made it what it is today. We buy homes on credit, then mortgage the homes to buy automobiles, or finance the transactions by monthly payments.

Now we are going to travel by train on the cuff. This is the latest and by far most dramatic gesture of the railroads to increase passenger traffic. All one has to do is apply at a ticket office or travel agency, pass the credit requirements and get away from it all in no time.

Not only that, but Pullman charges and even hotel accommodations may be financed by this installment plan. Monthly payments, plus a small financing fee—financing fees are always small—do the trick, with applications passed on in twenty-four hours.

The ease with which one can pull up stakes and travel with little or no immediate cash may be a great convenience or a heavy burden, depending on the judgment of the customer. If he is a fall guy for all the travel posters and resort literature, he may find himself up to his neck in debt.

But if a needed vacation or a necessary journey can be financed by monthly payments with prospects of steady income to meet them there seems no reason why a man should not take advantage of the railroads' offer. It is simply an extension of an established method of merchandising.

Turn of the War May Be Close at Hand

IF Hitler's army put everything it had—as it certainly must have been ordered to do—into the initial phase of its invasion of Holland and Belgium, the turn of the war may be at hand. This is not to say that Hitler has been conquered. Far from it.

But for the first time since Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia, which was actually the start of the present war, a dictator has encountered formidable opposition on the battlefield. With the exception of Stalin's excursion into Finland—which was regarded by many observers at the time as a minor campaign, it being held by them that the fate of totalitarianism would ultimately be decided on the Western Front — no move of conquest has proved as costly to the dictators as Hitler's invasion of Holland and Belgium.

All indications are that only the German air force has prevented the latest Hitler attack from being converted into disaster. And the German air force cannot keep up its initial pace for long. Many Nazi planes have been destroyed. Many others must be wearing out. Soon perhaps the Nazi air force will be conquered or will wear itself out and will then be little more effective than Hitler's submarine fleet now seems to be.

There are many ifs and buts, and the greatest battle in history may be looming on the Western Front as some reporters predict, but it would seem now as if the Allies were better able to withstand such a battle than Hitler. If Hitler loses in Belgium and Holland his situation will be precarious. If the Allies lose there they will be in as good position as ever to continue the war against a weakened foe.

The outlook for the Allied cause is much brighter than it has been at any time since the war started. The next few days may reveal whether the totalitarian menace has reached its high water mark. The future of dictatorial aggression is at stake in Hitler's drive into the lowlands. When Hitler is vanquished, Mussolini, Stalin and the Sun God will find their style has been effectively cramped too.

What to do with a defeated Germany may become quite a headache for the peacemakers, although to speculate on this may be premature use of the imagination. Obviously unfit to remain a nation, some disposition must be made of the millions of inhabitants that will render them incapable of embarking upon another orgy of murder two decades hence.

The Maryland Motor Record Becomes More Alarming

MORE SALUBRIOUS WEATHER is at hand, which will draw thousands from their homes and urban centers to the open road. But this should impress all motorists with the necessity for care and caution.

This is for the reason that the motor fatality record in this state has become more alarming. The state commissioner of motor vehicles reports that the first four months of this year show eighteen more deaths than the corresponding period of 1939. A year ago there were 116 fatalities during the period, while this year the total rose to 134.

The urban centers and nearby territory account for the most of these fatalities. During April, Baltimore city is charged with ten accidents resulting in ten deaths, whereas there were thirty accidents, resulting in thirty-six deaths, in all of the twenty-three counties. Fortunately Allegany county came through the month with a clean slate. That, however, is no reason for lessening the caution in driving here.

The record should impress drivers with the fact that unusual caution is especially necessary when driving in and near the thickly populated centers.

Alas, the Poor Herring Becomes a Foreigner

THE FEDERAL SURPLUS COMMODITIES CORPORATION has dealt with a lot of surplus crops, from peanuts to pineapples, but one of the knottiest problems ever encountered is to determine the nationality of a distressed herring.

This fine point came up when the state of Maine applied to FSCC to take over surplus herring from the big 1940 catch. Herring may be smoked or kippered, but in either case they are in distress when there are too many for the market. In such times, FSCC would normally step in and relieve the distress by buying the surplus and supporting the price. But this year the question arose as to whether the herring were really American citizens.

During some seasons the herring run along the United States shores, but in other seasons they run along the Canadian shores. Officials found that this year the fish preferred Canada, which made them foreigners. So FSCC told Maine it was unable to relieve the herring distress. Thus can government stretch its cloth to fit an embarrassing situation.

Mussolini says Italy is invulnerable with an army of 8,000,000 but judging by photographs of some of his soldiers, wouldn't their mammas have to go along to put on and take off their uniforms and wouldn't that ball up things in an emergency?

An article in an Australian newspaper relates that a landowner got rid of large swarms of grasshoppers at the crawling stage by dragging burning automobile tires over his property. The article doesn't say, but it is reasonable to suppose that he got rid of his neighbors too.

Alfalfa Bill Murray hops into page 3 as a candidate for Congress with a platform that cannot be argued away. Bill says his reason for running is he needs the money.

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I walk into a little shop to make a purchase. . . . The salesman is friendly and we talk of this and that. He boasts of his little girl's progress in school. I tell him about an accident I had on the highway recently—and he listens. . . . He understands "the personal element in business." . . . I appreciate that.

A man I know fights with his wife and tells me all about it. . . . I wish he wouldn't. I don't want to take sides and he thinks I should.

Nobody is half as proud as the man who raises flowers and you see him in the morning trotting off to the office with a big bunch of them in his arms—to decorate his office desk and to let him boast all day that he raised them all by himself.

Nobody, that is, but a little girl who has just made her first batch of biscuits—all by herself.

I heard a woman saying that her husband wouldn't "let" her do something. . . . Wouldn't LET her? Can such husbands exist? How do they establish dominion and domination over their wives? Can such wives exist? Why do they allow their husbands to have such power? . . . And yet this woman seemed quite happy. She didn't mind a bit, apparently.

Insufficiency Is Hit by Johnson

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

New York City, May 13.—The fat's in the fire and our navy is in Hawaii. Our miniature army is relatively equipped with bows and arrows. It is a pitiful Falstaffian insufficiency. We are quibbling about the design of a rifle already adopted and in production after years of experiment. It appears now that the navy has known the facts of its weakness against bombs from above, mines from below and secret foreign building programs for some time—without admission before the crisis.

Surely there was no ignorance in this government about the absolutely inefficient equipment of our army in almost everything needful for modern war and its own grotesque inadequacy.

Years Late

Everybody is now squawking about our lack of tin and rubber and our failure of action in motorizing and mechanizing our army. This column has been squawking about it for five years. Seven years ago this writer had written into the Recovery act ample authority and appropriations to do all these things as a combination measure of reemployment, recovery and defense. That was the year Hitler started. It was the year that the Administration gave most of that $3,300,000,000 to Harry Hopkins for raking leaves.

The situation is a grave one. It would be fatal error upon our part not to acknowledge that. In such experience as I have in war direction, I never tried to minimize the extent of disaster. There is no cause in my judgment for panic. I say that deliberately after a good deal of reflection but there is grave cause for pulling ourselves together. You cannot do that until you tell the country the facts, x x x Everybody knows that whatever was done, was done half-heartedly and ineffectively, without drive, unintelligently and when the war came, the tempo was hardly speeded up. There was the same leisureliness and inefficiency.

Queries by Lloyd George

Can anyone tell me he is satisfied with what we have done about airplanes, tanks and guns? Is anyone here satisfied with the steps we have taken to train the army?

The two foregoing paragraphs were not written by me. They were recently spoken by Lloyd George, of England. They can well be written here for us. They fit. "In such experience as I (also) have had in war direction"—the 1917 selective draft and 1918 industrial mobilization, they ring true.

There are other applicable words in that speech. "The nation is ready as long as its leadership is right, as long as you say clearly what you are aiming at, as long as you give confidence to them that their leaders are doing their best for them. I say now solemnly that, the Prime Minister can give an example of sacrifice, because I told him one thing, that there is nothing that would contribute more to victory in this war than that he should sacrifice his seals of office."

Responsibility Apparent

Who is responsible for our pitiable preparedness, for kicking up ill-will in the Pacific and sending our fleet there against a non-existent if not manufactured danger? Who is responsible for the sapping of our financial strength for defense by sending it with monstrous debt and unbearable taxes? Who has failed to regain our economic strength in active business, employment and agriculture after years of cockeyed experiment and futile spending of billions? Of whom can it be as well said as against Chamberlain, that the nation is ready as long as its leadership is saying "clearly what you are aiming at?"

There is certainly no support in this record for the silly slogan that if the war flares closer we must perpetuate the Fourth New Deal. This administration should promptly get better or get out—"sacrifice its seals of office." It is better to say this now than later when we may be staring full into the fire that England faces. — Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Hitler Has Wholesale Murder Threat As a Safeguard from Assassination

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Samuel Harden Church's recent offer of $1,000,000 for Adolf Hitler's delivery to the League of Nations, for trial as a criminal "against the peace and dignity of the world," has been taken with a certain amount of seriousness in some quarters.

Dr. S. H. Church

Even in congress one hears the suggestion that maybe Samuel's proposal constituted a violation of our neutrality, and that perhaps its author has laid himself open to prosecution by the justice department. Not that I think the department will act on this hint. Nevertheless, it goes to show how sensitive many folk are to anything that they deem the least bit likely to involve the United States in overseas hostilities.

If Sam had offered a reward for Adolf's actual bumping off, it's possible that he might have risked subjecting himself to federal punishment. He was careful to specify however, that the Fuehrer must be delivered "alive, unwounded and unhurt."

The bulk of congressional comment is to the effect that he made a hopelessly low bid. The Allies, these critics point out, are blowing in billions to attain the same end that Sam offers only a measly million for. If billions can't turn the trick, they ask, who'll be tempted by Sam Church's cheap promised reward?

Looks Like Joke

My own notion is that Samuel himself simply was joking. Still, there are those who say that, if so, he was joking with a buzz-saw.

It's true, I've wondered why some anti-Nazi German hasn't taken a pot-shot or tossed a bomb at Herr Hitler ere now. There surely must be a few Germans who hate him. I wouldn't recommend his (or anybody's) assassination, but there are individuals who do believe in it in emergencies, and who practice it occasionally.

I have a family connection, long resident in a consular capacity, in Leipzig, but recently returned, in retirement; so he can talk.

I asked him, "Isn't there any anti-Hitlerism in Germany? If there is, how happens it that it includes nobody with the ginger to take a shot at the chap?"

"Yes," the ex-consul replied, "there's some anti-Hitlerism there."

"But, in the first place," he continued, "Adolf is mighty well guarded.

Just Suppose—

"And suppose that Hitler chanced to be riding, for instance, past a big apartment house, like this," said the ex-consul.

(We were passing one, in Washington, at the time.)

"And suppose," he continued, "a shot were fired at him from one of its windows. And suppose his guardians couldn't identify the window it was fired from. It wouldn't make any difference whether the shot hit him or not. Everybody in that apartment house would be killed immediately. Then a massacre of all the Jews in Germany would follow.

"It's enough to make any well-meaning would-be assassin stop and think."

Subsequently, it will be recalled, there actually was an explosion at a Nazi gathering in Munich which was supposed to have been intended for Adolf's benefit, but he seems to have had an inkling that that gathering was an undesirable one for him to linger over. Anyway, he quit the building earlier than usual—and missed the explosion.

Popular Subscriptions

Sam Church didn't say he'd pay his whole anti-Hitler fund out of his own pocket.

He said he had subscriptions to it, to add to his personal contribution.

This popular subscription idea isn't altogether new.

The Chinese are taking one up now, to pay for the assassination of Wang Ching-Wei, Japan's puppet president of China, in opposition to the real president, Chiang Kai-Shek. Contributions as low as $1-Mex are thankfully accepted.

The Chinese are not as particular as is Samuel Church. They don't require delivery of Wang "alive, unwounded and unhurt." If he is so delivered he won't remain that way for very long.

The Damage All Done

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Senator Barkley is anxious to wind up the business of Congress and bring about adjournment by June 1. "We have accomplished most of our work," explains the majority leader, "so there is no reason why we can't get away from Washington around June first."

From the New Deal standpoint it very well may be that Congress has accomplished its work. For one thing, it has established a new high in spending, and that seems to be the major objective. Of course, there are a few such minor matters as amending the National Labor Relations act in the interest of industrial recovery; Senate action on the House approved Logan-Walter bill to provide judicial review of the findings of a multitude of New Deal agencies; completion of the Hatch politics reform by extending the federal prohibition on political activity to state employes who receive federal funds, etc. These, however, are simply matters in which the general public is interested. The administration is not interested in them—at least not in their enactment. It has the money it wants—or most of it—so why keep Congress around any longer?

That seems to be the administration point of view. For our part, it doesn't seem important now whether Congress quits or continues. It has done, perhaps, all the serious damage that even it can do. And there is just a chance that if adjournment isn't hurried sufficient pressure may be brought to bear to get one or two good measures through, such as the Logan-Walter bill the Hatch extension or the Labor act amendment.

More Teachers Than Jobs

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

Editor J. H. Hickman of the West Virginia School Journal, in his excellent publication, discusses the fact that there are so many more school teachers in the country than there are teaching jobs. He says that perhaps a conservative estimate for this state would place the number of persons with certificates at 24,000, with approximately 16,000 teaching positions in the public elementary and high schools. Listed among the 24,000 holding certificates are many who are employed in other occupations or are too old to engage in school work.

It would be safe to assume, he says, that the number holding credentials far outnumbers the possible opportunities for employment in the public schools. He goes on to observe that the supply of teachers for the school year 1940-41 will be obtained mainly from the list of those who are now certified to teach and from the numbers who will be eligible from the classes of the various training institutions. Under the operations of the continuing contract law, he says, the annual turnover in the teaching personnel will not assume proportions it has in past years.

The indications are, then, that a considerable number of certified teachers will not be able to secure positions and that hereafter the requirement for filling the gap made by those who annually drop out of service will assume a more fixed ratio. All this would indicate that the teaching profession is crowded to the extent that a lot of teachers never will be able to get jobs but at the present time a similar condition exists in most vocations and also among common laborers. Everyone hopes that the time eventually will come when there will be a job for every man and woman who desires employment.

War Disturbs Ratio of Sexes

Social Effects Profound, According to Medical Journal

"One of the more serious effects of war is the depletion of young men and the disturbance of the ratios of marriageable males and females," The Journal of the American Medical Association states. "In a recent brief review of this subject in the Statistical Bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company it was pointed out that seventy-two per cent of German military deaths and approximately fifty-five per cent of the French losses in the last great war were of men under 30. This situation was reflected in the postwar ratios of the two sexes. The French census of 1911 showed substantially the same number of males as females in every five year age group; the 1921 census showed an excess of 261, 206 and 176 females per thousand males in the age groups of 25 to 39, 30 to 34 and 35 to 39, respectively. In Germany likewise the prewar census of 1910 showed substantially equal proportions of males and females in each five year group. The 1925 census, however (the first taken by Germany after the war), showed an excess of 150 women per thousand men at ages 25 to 29, 259 per thousand at ages 30 to 34 and 181 per thousand at ages 35 to 39.

"Some of the results, such as the great increase in the proportion of marriages in the postwar period in which the groom was much older than the bride, were quite obvious. Another effect, although perhaps inextricably intertwined with economic factors, was the continued fall in the birth rate after the war. Clearly the actual battle losses are matched by losses in future population due to reductions in the birth rate. Furthermore, the relatively imponderable social effects of a deficiency of men, especially in certain age groups, must profoundly disturb the normal life of nations."

Earless Words Trouble Augen

By EDWIN C. HILL

We were somewhat confused Mr. Hymie Augen's comment a tough word will stick around til it got its ears batted off. There didn't seem to be a lick of sense in what he was saying. However, we kept on hurrying him until we extracted what appeared to be a rough idea of Mr. Augen's thought.

Edwin C. Hill

"If a word isn't quite polite enough to be printed they put on it, and then when nobody so much about being polite let it shed the ears and step just like any other word. The ears Mr. Augen explained, "mean the writer says he wouldn't use a word but that somebody does."

Perhaps he's right. Certain many once-dubious words are longer in the protective custo of quotation marks. Never lack the modern instance, Mr. Augen took out from under the band of his hat a newspaper clip ping headlined, "Holland Finds Hot Money Sent Elsewhere." said the way they put things the newspapers these days him feel right at home. It was old times. He said he could understand the papers better than used to, but he was still troubled

It Rides Along Now

"I been reading a lot about oil, too," he continued. "A few ago, they always put those ears it. Now they just let it ride like it wasn't a gate-crasher really belong to the club. It's way with a lot of words which to be jake with us down in He street but which would make professor or a preacher or an tor have a duck fit if anybody one of them.

"The other day I met a named Squint Harlow who spent a lot of time in the for handling hot jewelry. I seen Squint for a few years in and out so often you can't track of him—and we took a back over the old days. It was how many old friends had bumped off or crippled or or something; but Squint says world looks better to him than ever had and we mustn't be hearted.

Hymie Is Skeptical

"I tell him he's wacky, with Hitler throwing a big scare all the world, and pari-mutuels no more free lunch and beer cents for a small glass and chance to rig a parlay the way did when the tracks were etc, I was going on like that Squint cut in. 'Hymie,' he says, can figure it clear across the board you can figure the six-eight, the and the comb, you can wear smoked glasses and slip the other guy sanded deck and we win.'

"I said nuts, and who are we what did we ever win, and a like you don't win anything another stretch, etc., but he me again and looks at me like the doctor that gives you the low in the advertisement for headache powders. 'Hymie,' he says, 'we because the world is catching with us.' Then he showed me piece in the paper about the money in Holland. 'We savvy he says.

Big Fence Needed

"Then he goes on to show if they have hot money they have a big fence somewhere they won't even used to put in fix. They slipped the knock-out drops to the League of Nations at the start, and there aren't cops. Then he showed me other pieces in the paper about Brooklyn mob, in which they put words like fence and gyp and and kling and conk and clip moll and hoosegow and har bull and dick and gumshoe cokey, etc., without any of little ears on them. That was give me the idea that people along with their words and you put it down here that Squint an assist on that.

'Yes, Hymie,' Squint says, 'they're catching up with us and running things our way.'

Cop Welcomed

"That Squint, he has little eyes and snag teeth and I didn't like the way he smiled. I told him I had to see a guy in a hurry paid the check for the beers and started a hotfoot home. I didn't feel so good. On the way, I Mulrooney, a nice cop I used play pinochle with. We had a talk and Mulrooney told about his new boy and I felt would fix things up somehow if body else did. It was about the time I was glad to meet a cop." Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Quotable Quotes

By Representative Charles I. Faddis, Democrat, of Pennsylvania

It is essential to the success of representative government that the boards, bureaus, or commissions should be held strictly to the letter of the law. Not very many days ago we had the Walter-Logan Bill in front of us. It was the frequent and deliberate misinterpretation of acts of Congress on the part of bureaus commissions and boards which brought about the necessity for the Walter-Logan Bill.

Darling Cartoon Impresses Need of a Cleaning

THAT is a timely cartoon by Jay N. Darling appearing today on this page, illustrating the reluctance of the New Dealers to effect the remedies they promised they would provide for mistakes they should make.

The cartoon has to do with the amendments to the Hatch act, by which its provisions for restricting federal employes from engaging in political activities would be extended to include state jobholders paid wholly or in part with federal funds.

As Wendell Willkie pointed out in an address the other day at St. Paul, the country "has been shocked by the brazen spectacle of some of our state organizations," including that of taking a percentage of official salaries. It has been shocked also by the spectacle of these government employes in turn using their powers to intimidate the voters. While the Hatch measures will not wholly solve this problem, they will at least contribute to a healthful cleansing of state politics.

The cartoon applies equally to the frantic fight the New Dealers are making against the Logan-Walters bill, which would provide relief through court appeal from the many injustices coming from the myriad of regulatory commissions, bureaus, agencies and other government bodies created by the New Deal, many of them under false pretenses. These groups have been endowed with vast undefined powers and their requirements are generally so costly that it is virtually impossible for the little businessman and smaller corporations to raise the money with which to meet them. Thus they are arbitrarily shut out of the picture.

As Willkie pointed out, you can elect your congressman, and you can have some check on him, which he realizes, as you can vote him out of office if he doesn't do the right and decent thing, but you do not elect your commissioner, in whom tremendous and practically unlimited powers are concentrated and whose job is secure.

This, as pointed out, is purely personal government, the oldest form of government in the world—reactionary in the full sense—and business cannot operate successfully under a personal form of government. It is high time, indeed, that we return from this sort of government to a government of just laws.

Installment Plan Extends To Railroad Travel

DICTATOR NATIONS have various Plans, but only the United States has the Installment Plan.

Buying on credit is an American institution. Americans may not have invented it, but they certainly made it what it is today. We buy homes on credit, then mortgage the homes to buy automobiles, or finance the transactions by monthly payments.

Now we are going to travel by train on the cuff. This is the latest and by far most dramatic gesture of the railroads to increase passenger traffic. All one has to do is apply at a ticket office or travel agency, pass the credit requirements and get away from it all in no time.

Not only that, but Pullman charges and even hotel accommodations may be financed by this installment plan. Monthly payments, plus a small financing fee—financing fees are always small—do the trick, with applications passed on in twenty-four hours.

The ease with which one can pull up stakes and travel with little or no immediate cash may be a great convenience or a heavy burden, depending on the judgment of the customer. If he is a fall guy for all the travel posters and resort literature, he may find himself up to his neck in debt.

But if a needed vacation or a necessary journey can be financed by monthly payments with prospects of steady income to meet them there seems no reason why a man should not take advantage of the railroads' offer. It is simply an extension of an established method of merchandising.

Turn of the War May Be Close at Hand

IF Hitler's army put everything it had—as it certainly must have been ordered to do—into the initial phase of its invasion of Holland and Belgium, the turn of the war may be at hand. This is not to say that Hitler has been conquered. Far from it.

But for the first time since Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia, which was actually the start of the present war, a dictator has encountered formidable opposition on the battlefield. With the exception of Stalin's excursion into Finland—which was regarded by many observers at the time as a minor campaign, it being held by them that the fate of totalitarianism would ultimately be decided on the Western Front — no move of conquest has proved as costly to the dictators as Hitler's invasion of Holland and Belgium.

All indications are that only the German air force has prevented the latest Hitler attack from being converted into disaster. And the German air force cannot keep up its initial pace for long. Many Nazi planes have been destroyed. Many others must be wearing out. Soon perhaps the Nazi air force will be conquered or will wear itself out and will then be little more effective than Hitler's submarine fleet now seems to be.

There are many ifs and buts, and the greatest battle in history may be looming on the Western Front as some reporters predict, but it would seem now as if the Allies were better able to withstand such a battle than Hitler. If Hitler loses in Belgium and Holland his situation will be precarious. If the Allies lose there they will be in as good position as ever to continue the war against a weakened foe.

The outlook for the Allied cause is much brighter than it has been at any time since the war started. The next few days may reveal whether the totalitarian menace has reached its high water mark. The future of dictatorial aggression is at stake in Hitler's drive into the lowlands. When Hitler is vanquished, Mussolini, Stalin and the Sun God will find their style has been effectively cramped too.

What to do with a defeated Germany may become quite a headache for the peacemakers, although to speculate on this may be premature use of the imagination. Obviously unfit to remain a nation, some disposition must be made of the millions of inhabitants that will render them incapable of embarking upon another orgy of murder two decades hence.

The Maryland Motor Record Becomes More Alarming

MORE SALUBRIOUS WEATHER is at hand, which will draw thousands from their homes and urban centers to the open road. But this should impress all motorists with the necessity for care and caution.

This is for the reason that the motor fatality record in this state has become more alarming. The state commissioner of motor vehicles reports that the first four months of this year show eighteen more deaths than the corresponding period of 1939. A year ago there were 116 fatalities during the period, while this year the total rose to 134.

The urban centers and nearby territory account for the most of these fatalities. During April, Baltimore city is charged with ten accidents resulting in ten deaths, whereas there were thirty accidents, resulting in thirty-six deaths, in all of the twenty-three counties. Fortunately Allegany county came through the month with a clean slate. That, however, is no reason for lessening the caution in driving here.

The record should impress drivers with the fact that unusual caution is especially necessary when driving in and near the thickly populated centers.

Alas, the Poor Herring Becomes a Foreigner

THE FEDERAL SURPLUS COMMODITIES CORPORATION has dealt with a lot of surplus crops, from peanuts to pineapples, but one of the knottiest problems ever encountered is to determine the nationality of a distressed herring.

This fine point came up when the state of Maine applied to FSCC to take over surplus herring from the big 1940 catch. Herring may be smoked or kippered, but in either case they are in distress when there are too many for the market. In such times, FSCC would normally step in and relieve the distress by buying the surplus and supporting the price. But this year the question arose as to whether the herring were really American citizens.

During some seasons the herring run along the United States shores, but in other seasons they run along the Canadian shores. Officials found that this year the fish preferred Canada, which made them foreigners. So FSCC told Maine it was unable to relieve the herring distress. Thus can government stretch its cloth to fit an embarrassing situation.

Mussolini says Italy is invulnerable with an army of 8,000,000 but judging by photographs of some of his soldiers, wouldn't their mammas have to go along to put on and take off their uniforms and wouldn't that ball up things in an emergency?

An article in an Australian newspaper relates that a landowner got rid of large swarms of grasshoppers at the crawling stage by dragging burning automobile tires over his property. The article doesn't say, but it is reasonable to suppose that he got rid of his neighbors too.

Alfalfa Bill Murray hops into page 3 as a candidate for Congress with a platform that cannot be argued away. Bill says his reason for running is he needs the money.

Insufficiency Is Hit by Johnson

Hugh Johnson

New York City, May 13.—The fat's in the fire and our navy is in Hawaii. Our miniature army is relatively equipped with bows and arrows. It is a pitiful Falstaffian insufficiency. We are quibbling about the design of a rifle already adopted and in production after years of experiment. It appears now that the navy has known the facts of its weakness against bombs from above, mines from below and secret foreign building programs for some time—without admission before the crisis.

Surely there was no ignorance in this government about the absolutely inefficient equipment of our army in almost everything needful for modern war and its own grotesque inadequacy.

Years Late

Everybody is now squawking about our lack of tin and rubber and our failure of action in motorizing and mechanizing our army. This column has been squawking about it for five years. Seven years ago this writer had written into the Recovery act ample authority and appropriations to do all these things as a combination measure of reemployment, recovery and defense. That was the year Hitler started. It was the year that the Administration gave most of that $3,300,000,000 to Harry Hopkins for raking leaves.

The situation is a grave one. It would be fatal error upon our part not to acknowledge that. In such experience as I have in war direction, I never tried to minimize the extent of disaster. There is no cause in my judgment for panic. I say that deliberately after a good deal of reflection but there is grave cause for pulling ourselves together. You cannot do that until you tell the country the facts, x x x Everybody knows that whatever was done, was done half-heartedly and ineffectively, without drive, unintelligently and when the war came, the tempo was hardly speeded up. There was the same leisureliness and inefficiency.

Queries by Lloyd George

Can anyone tell me he is satisfied with what we have done about airplanes, tanks and guns? Is anyone here satisfied with the steps we have taken to train the army?

The two foregoing paragraphs were not written by me. They were recently spoken by Lloyd George, of England. They can well be written here for us. They fit. "In such experience as I (also) have had in war direction"—the 1917 selective draft and 1918 industrial mobilization, they ring true.

There are other applicable words in that speech. "The nation is ready as long as its leadership is right, as long as you say clearly what you are aiming at, as long as you give confidence to them that their leaders are doing their best for them. I say now solemnly that, the Prime Minister can give an example of sacrifice, because I told him one thing, that there is nothing that would contribute more to victory in this war than that he should sacrifice his seals of office."

Who is responsible for our pitiable preparedness, for kicking up ill-will in the Pacific and sending our fleet there against a non-existent if not manufactured danger? Of whom can it be as well said as against Chamberlain, that the nation is ready as long as its leadership is saying "clearly what you are aiming at?"

There is certainly no support in this record for the silly slogan that if the war flares closer we must perpetuate the Fourth New Deal. This administration should promptly get better or get out—"sacrifice its seals of office." Samuel Harden Church's recent offer of $1,000,000 for Adolf Hitler's delivery to the League of Nations, for trial as a criminal "against the peace and dignity of the world," has been taken with a certain amount of seriousness in some quarters.

Dr. S. H. Church

Even in congress one hears the suggestion that maybe Samuel's proposal constituted a violation of our neutrality, and that perhaps its author has laid himself open to prosecution by the justice department. Not that I think the department will act on this hint. Anyway, he quit the building earlier than usual—and missed the explosion.

Popular Subscriptions

Sam Church didn't say he'd pay his whole anti-Hitler fund out of his own pocket.

He said he had subscriptions to it, to add to his personal contribution.

This popular subscription idea isn't altogether new.

The Chinese are taking one up now, to pay for the assassination of Wang Ching-Wei, Japan's puppet president of China, in opposition to the real president, Chiang Kai-Shek. Contributions as low as $1-Mex are thankfully accepted.

The Chinese are not as particular as is Samuel Church. They don't require delivery of Wang "alive, unwounded and unhurt." If he is so delivered he won't remain that way for very long.

Senator Barkley is anxious to wind up the business of Congress and bring about adjournment by June 1. "We have accomplished most of our work," explains the majority leader, "so there is no reason why we can't get away from Washington around June first."

From the New Deal standpoint it very well may be that Congress has accomplished its work. For one thing, it has established a new high in spending, and that seems to be the major objective. Of course, there are a few such minor matters as amending the National Labor Relations act in the interest of industrial recovery; Senate action on the House approved Logan-Walter bill to provide judicial review of the findings of a multitude of New Deal agencies; completion of the Hatch politics reform by extending the federal prohibition on political activity to state employes who receive federal funds, etc. These, however, are simply matters in which the general public is interested. The administration is not interested in them—at least not in their enactment. It has the money it wants—or most of it—so why keep Congress around any longer?

That seems to be the administration point of view. For our part, it doesn't seem important now whether Congress quits or continues. It has done, perhaps, all the serious damage that even it can do. And there is just a chance that if adjournment isn't hurried sufficient pressure may be brought to bear to get one or two good measures through, such as the Logan-Walter bill the Hatch extension or the Labor act amendment.

More Teachers Than Jobs

From the Parkersburg, W. Va., Sentinel

Editor J. H. Hickman of the West Virginia School Journal, in his excellent publication, discusses the fact that there are so many more school teachers in the country than there are teaching jobs. He says that perhaps a conservative estimate for this state would place the number of persons with certificates at 24,000, with approximately 16,000 teaching positions in the public elementary and high schools. Listed among the 24,000 holding certificates are many who are employed in other occupations or are too old to engage in school work.

It would be safe to assume, he says, that the number holding credentials far outnumbers the possible opportunities for employment in the public schools. He goes on to observe that the supply of teachers for the school year 1940-41 will be obtained mainly from the list of those who are now certified to teach and from the numbers who will be eligible from the classes of the various training institutions. Under the operations of the continuing contract law, he says, the annual turnover in the teaching personnel will not assume proportions it has in past years.

The indications are, then, that a considerable number of certified teachers will not be able to secure positions and that hereafter the requirement for filling the gap made by those who annually drop out of service will assume a more fixed ratio. All this would indicate that the teaching profession is crowded to the extent that a lot of teachers never will be able to get jobs but at the present time a similar condition exists in most vocations and also among common laborers. Everyone hopes that the time eventually will come when there will be a job for every man and woman who desires employment.

War Disturbs Ratio of Sexes

Social Effects Profound, According to Medical Journal

"One of the more serious effects of war is the depletion of young men and the disturbance of the ratios of marriageable males and females." The Journal of the American Medical Association states. "In a recent brief review of this subject in the Statistical Bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company it was pointed out that seventy-two per cent of German military deaths and approximately fifty-five per cent of the French losses in the last great war were of men under 30. This situation was reflected in the postwar ratios of the two sexes. The French census of 1911 showed substantially the same number of males as females in every five year age group; the 1921 census showed an excess of 261, 206 and 176 females per thousand males in the age groups of 25 to 39, 30 to 34 and 35 to 39, respectively. In Germany likewise the prewar census of 1910 showed substantially equal proportions of males and females in each five year group. The 1925 census, however (the first taken by Germany after the war), showed an excess of 150 women per thousand men at ages 25 to 29, 259 per thousand at ages 30 to 34 and 181 per thousand at ages 35 to 39.

"Some of the results, such as the great increase in the proportion of marriages in the postwar period in which the groom was much older than the bride, were quite obvious. Another effect, although perhaps inextricably intertwined with economic factors, was the continued fall in the birth rate after the war. Clearly the actual battle losses are matched by losses in future population due to reductions in the birth rate. Furthermore, the relatively imponderable social effects of a deficiency of men, especially in certain age groups, must profoundly disturb the normal life of nations."

Earless Words Trouble Augen

By EDWIN C. HILL

We were somewhat confu Mr. Hymie Augen's comment a tough word will stick around til it got its ears batted off. There didn't seem to be a lick of sense in what he was saying. However, we kept on hurrying him until we extracted what appeared to be a rough idea of Mr. Augen's thought.

Edwin C

"If a word isn't quite polite enough to be printed they put on it, and then when nobody so much about being polite let it shed the ears and step just like any other word. The Mr. Augen explained, "mean the writer says he wouldn't a word but that somebody does."

Perhaps he's right. Certa many once-dubious words longer in the protective of quotation marks. Never the modern instance, Mr. Aug took out from under the band of his hat a newspaper ping headlined, "Holland Finds Hot Money Sent Elsewhere said the way they put thing the newspapers these days him feel right at home. It was old times. He said he could stand the papers better than used to, but he was still troubl

It's way with a lot of words which to be jake with us down in street but which would make professor or a preacher or an e tor have a duck fit if anybody one of them.

"The other day I met a fel named Squint Harlow who spent a lot of time in the for handling hot jewelry. I seen Squint for a few years in and out so often you can't track of him—and we took a back over the old days. It was how many old friends had bumped off or crippled or or something; but Squint say world looks better to him than ever had and we mustn't be hearted.

Hymie Is Skeptical

"I tell him he's wacky, with Hitler throwing a big scare all the world, and pari-mutuels no more free lunch and beer cents for a small glass a chance to rig a parlay the way did when the tracks were etc. I was going on like that Squint cut in. 'Hymie,' he says, can figure it clear across the bo you can figure the six-eight, the and the comb, you can wear smok glasses and slip the other guy sanded deck and we win.'

"I said nuts, and who are we what did we ever win, and a like you don't win anything another stretch, etc., but he me again and looks at me like doctor that gives you the low in the advertisement for head powders. "Then he goes on to show if they have hot money they have a big fence somewhere they won't even used to put in fix. They slipped the knock-drops to the League of Nations at the start, and there aren't cops. Then he showed me pieces in the paper about Brooklyn mob, in which they words like fence and gyp and and kling and conk and clip moll and hoosegow and bull and dick and gumshoe cokey, etc., without any of little ears on them. That was give me the idea that people along with their words and you put it down here that Squint an assist on that.

Quotable Quotes

By Representative Charles I. Faddis, Democrat, of Pennsylvania

It is essential to the success of representative government that the boards, bureaus, or commissions should be held strictly to the letter of the law. Not very many days ago we had the Walter-Logan Bill in front of us. It was the frequent and deliberate misinterpretation of acts of Congress on the part of bureaus, commissions and boards which brought about the necessity for the Walter-Logan Bill.

Reserved for the last would be the picture of them; and this he would display ever so casually. Then . . .

The library door opened, interrupting his thoughts. "Hello, dear," his wife purred as she came into the room. She dropped into a large chair.

Wast slammed the album shut and turned on her what he thought was a bland, innocuous smile.

"I see you have some more pictures for the album. Let me see them." She came toward the desk.

"Not now, dear. I'll show them to you some other time. All of them. What did you do today?" he asked in an effort to change the subject.

"Nothing much," she said casually. She stood up and walked restlessly about the room.

He pulled back the heavy drapes and looked out the window.

"Some blizzard tonight," he declared. "You know, Marian, I envy Roger Waring. Here he is enjoying nice warm sunshine in Africa, while we sit here hoping for spring." He glanced covertly at his wife.

"But Roger Waring is back in town. He returned day before yesterday," she said quickly. "He called on the phone today. I forgot to tell you."

"Really! Well, that's news. Let's have him over to dinner tonight. We better make it tomorrow night, instead. It's rather late. I'm curious to hear about his interesting experiences."

He was so engrossed in his plans for revenge that he scarcely heard Marian say that she would call Roger and invite him for dinner.

When he reached home the following evenin, Marian wasn't in yet as usual. He sat in the library, going over each detail of the plan he had decided upon. Taking out the album, he placed it on the desk to have it ready for the little drama to be enacted that night. Pleasant emotions welled up in him at the thought of their moral downfall. He turned back the cover and idly thumbed through it to have one more look at the convicting picture.

It was gone! He gaped stupidly at another picture laying loosely in the album, a note clipped to the bottom. He read: "Barton—You looked so ridiculous last night guarding your precious album. So I looked at it this morning. Now I am on my way to Reno. Part of the evidence my investigators uncovered is here above, replacing your picture of me. Marian."

The picture showed himself and his pretty secretary at a beach last summer. He wondered how long Marian had known of this.—(Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.)

Plane Passenger Drowns in River

Hudson, N. Y., May 13 (AP)—One person was drowned and another critically injured Sunday when the airplane in which they were following the annual Albany-New York outboard motorboat race hit a high tension line and crashed into the river.

The plane's pilot, Louis Hatsfeld, 30, Rye, N. Y., was taken to a hospital while his passenger, Georgette Gaydoul, 26, of Martindale, N. Y., went down with the plane when it sank in 30 feet of water.

Father Coughlin Sees War Peril to U. S.

Detroit, May 13 (AP) — The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin asserted here a "total war" is evolving rapidly and that the United States might soon be a participant.

"Possibly, before this week will have elapsed, this total war will have spread to the Orient," he said in his final radio broadcast until next fall.

"It is ominous that a considerable portion of our navy is stationed at the Hawaiian islands. It is possible that within a short time we Americans will find ourselves involved in a World War on the Pacific Coast."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE VERY BEST SPOT

IN DUPLICATE play, you attach much greater importance than in rubber bridge to finding the contract which will produce the maximum number of points for your side. You are not interested merely in reaching the game, small slam or grand slam safely, but want to be in the suit or No Trump which will produce a few more points than some other choice. The few extra points may mean that you win the deal from your rivals, whereas in rubber bridge you look for a slight bit greater safety at the cost of giving up a few points, if necessary, because of the rank of declarations.

Two brilliant Walters—Beinecke in the North and Malowan in the South—bid this deal with extreme thoroughness to reach the safest maximum contract in the recent Vanderbilt Cup national championship tournament.

Mr. Beinecke's 3-Hearts bid was safer, following his opening pass, than 2-Hearts, which might be passed when it looked as if a game was certain. Mr. Malowan's 3-Spades was meant to show the A only, as a cue bid, and ask for his partner's lowest A, which was shown with the 4-Clubs. The Blackwood convention then asked how many aces North had all told, and when he showed just one with 5-Diamonds Mr. Malowan knew the opponents held the diamond A.

The 5-No Trumps question about kings brought the response that only one was held, so 6-Hearts was safer than the 6-No Trumps that would have been bid if Mr. Beinecke had been able to show two aces.

Muscle Work for Beauty

HELEN PARRISH . . . considers the back bend an important exercise for beauty's sake.

By HELEN FOLLETT

THOSE OF you who make terrible faces when anyone mentions exercise should remember that the foundation of good looks is composed of health, vitality, good circulation, sound digestion and a nervous system that doesn't have fits. These component parts of beauty cannot be attained without plenty of fresh air and a little strenuous muscle work.

To carry fashionable dry goods in a distinguished manner the feminine shape must be slender of limb, not scrawny, but neatly padded, trim of waist, chest fully developed. The best way to get chesty and to have a normal bust is to inflate the lungs, give them air washings, and hold yourself beautifully at all times. Poor posture means a flat chest. Yes'sum, and horrid back lines. And a ploppy place below the belt.

Without muscular activity the muscles of the abdomen go slack, stomach and intestinal tract drop, cause digestive disturbances. The muscles of the mid-section should be strong and resilient, form a natural corset. Then the figure is trim and graceful. Pretty little loafers whose chief exercise is lifting an eyebrow now and then will be sorry later in life when youthful lines have disappeared.

Before using soap and water at bedtime, remove make-up with a cosmetic oil or a cream of light consistency. That's the neater method and it is what the beauty doctor orders. The cream or oil will allay the drying effects of the soap that is used afterwards.

Whenever the skin is rough, feels sensitive, cream should be used again after the soapy cleansing. If lines are forming, the emollient should be a heavy one to offer resistance to the fingers when it is applied, and it should be left on over night. No chance of its growing facial fuzzers; that's just a superstition; nuthin' to it.

Problem Parents— The Disrespectful Type

"Don't shout in a tone you wouldn't use on an enemy."

By SARAH WILSON
AP Feature Service Writer

You'd be startled if your six-year-old son said to you one day, "Don't speak to me in that tone of voice, mother. It's disrespectful."

Yet the child might be justified. It is disrespectful for any adult to treat any child discourteously. A child is as much of a person as an adult, and is entitled to the same courtesy and respect an adult gets.

Don't offend him by shouting in a tone you wouldn't use on your worst enemy. Don't insult him by ignoring his questions or half-listening to his attempts at conversation. Don't give brusk orders, "Hand me this," "Run and get me that"; soften them with a "Please" or a "Would you mind." You'd never give orders in such a way to an adult, not even to a person hired to receive your orders. You'd know that such disrespect would make for discontent and inefficiency. In the same way your child, treated with careless disrespect, will resent you and your authority, and will grow rebellious.

A common form of disrespectfulness among problem parents is the habit of discussing a child's faults with other people in front of the child. Such rudeness!

"Yes, I have the same trouble about Jim's posture. See how he sits there all slumped forward, though I've told him and told him. . . ." Imagine how Jim feels to hear himself spoken of as if he were a puppy; to hear his faults paraded before an outsider. And it's just as embarrassing for a child to hear his mother repeat his cute sayings right in front of him. What can he do but squirm?

The problems of problem parents would diminish if they'd learn to be respectful.

In the Elevator

There are men who think it is a silly habit to remove the hat when they enter an elevator with women. If you believe in the practice, however, it is just as necessary to take off your hat when only your wife, mother or sister is in the elevator with you as it is when it is full of women or your best girl friend.

Those Nervous Habits

Train yourself to overcome any little nervous habits that may be annoying to your companions and which surely detract from your charm. See that your hair is nicely arranged before you leave your room, and then don't keep patting and arranging it, as many women do, in public.

Dinner Dress Required

When going out for the evening, if the husband wears a tuxedo or dinner jacket, the wife should wear a dinner, not an evening dress.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

THE VERY BEST SPOT

IN DUPLICATE play, you attach much greater importance than in rubber bridge to finding the contract which will produce the maximum number of points for your side. You are not interested merely in reaching the game, small slam or grand slam safely, but want to be in the suit or No Trump which will produce a few more points than some other choice. The few extra points may mean that you win the deal from your rivals, whereas in rubber bridge you look for a slight bit greater safety at the cost of giving up a few points, if necessary, because of the rank of declarations.

Two brilliant Walters—Beinecke in the North and Malowan in the South—bid this deal with extreme thoroughness to reach the safest maximum contract in the recent Vanderbilt Cup national championship tournament.

Mr. Beinecke's 3-Hearts bid was safer, following his opening pass, than 2-Hearts, which might be passed when it looked as if a game was certain. Mr. Malowan's 3-Spades was meant to show the A only, as a cue bid, and ask for his partner's lowest A, which was shown with the 4-Clubs. The Blackwood convention then asked how many aces North had all told, and when he showed just one with 5-Diamonds Mr. Malowan knew the opponents held the diamond A.

The 5-No Trumps question about kings brought the response that only one was held, so 6-Hearts was safer than the 6-No Trumps that would have been bid if Mr. Beinecke had been able to show two aces.

Muscle Work for Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

THOSE OF you who make terrible faces when anyone mentions exercise should remember that the foundation of good looks is composed of health, vitality, good circulation, sound digestion and a nervous system that doesn't have fits. These component parts of beauty cannot be attained without plenty of fresh air and a little strenuous muscle work.

To carry fashionable dry goods in a distinguished manner the feminine shape must be slender of limb, not scrawny, but neatly padded, trim of waist, chest fully developed. The best way to get chesty and to have a normal bust is to inflate the lungs, give them air washings, and hold yourself beautifully at all times. Poor posture means a flat chest. Yes'sum, and horrid back lines. And a ploppy place below the belt.

Without muscular activity the muscles of the abdomen go slack, stomach and intestinal tract drop, cause digestive disturbances. The muscles of the mid-section should be strong and resilient, form a natural corset. Then the figure is trim and graceful. Pretty little loafers whose chief exercise is lifting an eyebrow now and then will be sorry later in life when youthful lines have disappeared.

Before using soap and water at bedtime, remove make-up with a cosmetic oil or a cream of light consistency. That's the neater method and it is what the beauty doctor orders. The cream or oil will allay the drying effects of the soap that is used afterwards.

Whenever the skin is rough, feels sensitive, cream should be used again after the soapy cleansing. If lines are forming, the emollient should be a heavy one to offer resistance to the fingers when it is applied, and it should be left on over night. No chance of its growing facial fuzzers; that's just a superstition; nuthin' to it.

Problem Parents— The Disrespectful Type

"Don't shout in a tone you wouldn't use on an enemy."

By SARAH WILSON

AP Feature Service Writer

You'd be startled if your six-year-old son said to you one day, "Don't speak to me in that tone of voice, mother. It's disrespectful."

Yet the child might be justified. It is disrespectful for any adult to treat any child discourteously. A child is as much of a person as an adult, and is entitled to the same courtesy and respect an adult gets.

Don't offend him by shouting in a tone you wouldn't use on your worst enemy. Don't insult him by ignoring his questions or half-listening to his attempts at conversation. Don't give brusk orders. "Hand me this," "Run and get me that"; soften them with a "Please" or a "Would you mind." You'd never give orders in such a way to an adult, not even to a person hired to receive your orders. You'd know that such disrespect would make for discontent and inefficiency. In the same way your child, treated with careless disrespect, will resent you and your authority, and will grow rebellious.

A common form of disrespectfulness among problem parents is the habit of discussing a child's faults with other people in front of the child. Such rudeness!

"Yes, I have the same trouble about Jim's posture. See how he sits there all slumped forward, though I've told him and told him. . . ." Imagine how Jim feels to hear himself spoken of as if he were a puppy; to hear his faults paraded before an outsider. And it's just as embarrassing for a child to hear his mother repeat his cute sayings right in front of him. What can he do but squirm?

The problems of problem parents would diminish if they'd learn to be respectful.

In the Elevator

There are men who think it is a silly habit to remove the hat when they enter an elevator with women. If you believe in the practice, however, it is just as necessary to take off your hat when only your wife, mother or sister is in the elevator with you as it is when it is full of women or your best girl friend.

Those Nervous Habits

Train yourself to overcome any little nervous habits that may be annoying to your companions and which surely detract from your charm. See that your hair is nicely arranged before you leave your room, and then don't keep patting and arranging it, as many women do, in public.

Dinner Dress Required

When going out for the evening, if the husband wears a tuxedo or dinner jacket, the wife should wear a dinner, not an evening dress.

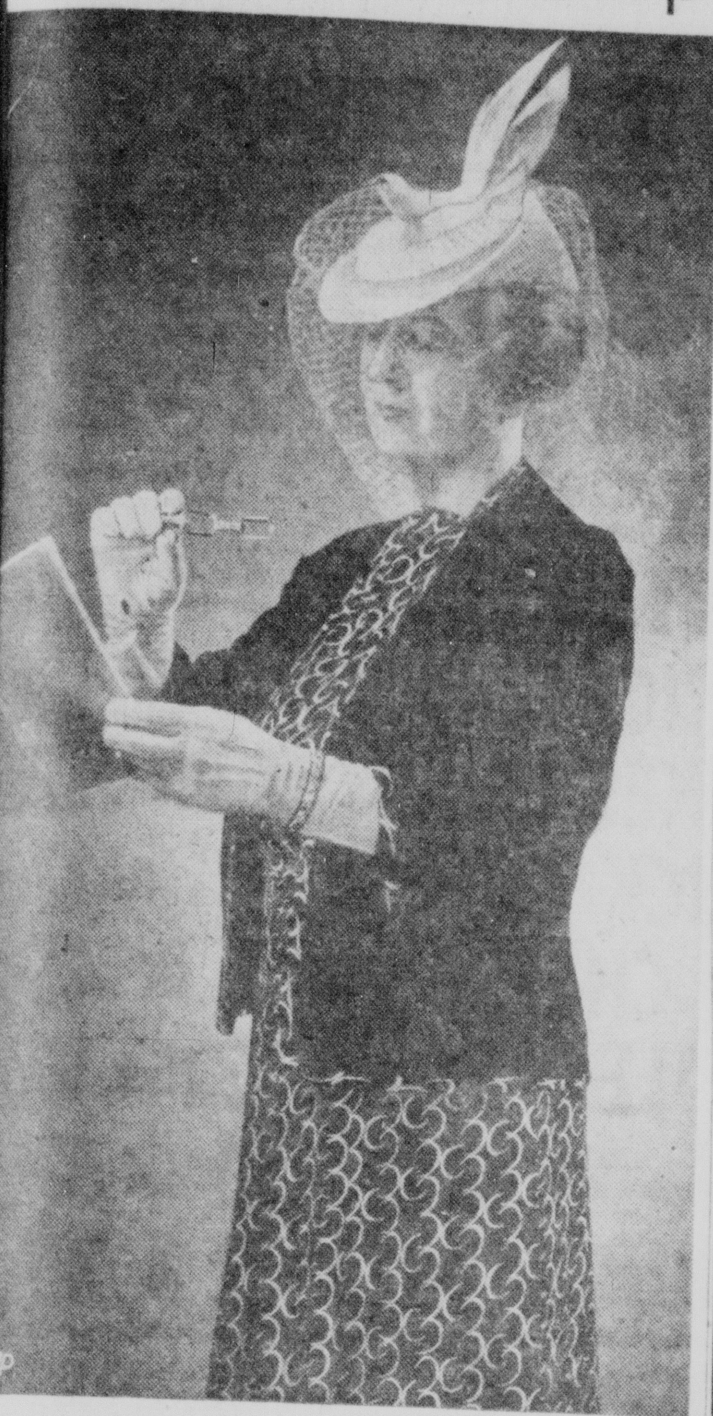
Mother's Clothes Have Color And a Softer Drape This Year



Costume for mother is translated here in a black crepe frock printed with white and dark red moons topped with a print-bound black jacket. There is fashion news in her lorgnette. Its handle, a diamond-studded clip, snaps to neckline of her frock, allowing the glasses to tuck inside out of sight.

By ADELAIDE KERR
(AP) Fashion Editor

Clothes for mother this year flatter faces as well as figures.

All that sober black and white business has been pushed into the background in favor of clothes that cast a little glow of color on skins which are no longer young. Navy blue and white; gray and white, with a touch of old rose, black and white, with a little dash of dark red appear in street clothes. Soft blue and dusty pink crepes make softly tailored frocks for lazy hot afternoons on the porch.

The matronly surplice cut seems to have been banned for good. In its place has come a soft suave line achieved with tucks and drapes. Necklines end in a frothy white chou instead of being framed in old-lady frills. And a bit of bright ribbon ties a belt. (Wherever color appears in these clothes it is used with definite discretion in keeping with mother's dignity and her years.)

Costumes for her spotlight appearances—presiding at the club, or visiting a son at college—have been given special attention this year. Smartest are costume suits combining a dress with a jacket or redingote of printed or plain crepe.

Even special lingerie has been designed to insure a good fit to mother's clothes. Slips for matronly figures are made of embroidered crepe and Chinese brocade, slightly fitted at the waistline, but cut on the straight instead of on the bias, to prevent their pushing up on large-hipped figures.

In view of all this attention to clothes for the older woman, mother's wardrobes are being assembled with greater interest and care. Here is one assembled by Dorothy Dignam, young New York advertising woman, for her mother, who will spend half her summer in Manhattan, the rest at one of its seaside suburbs:

Redingote of black sheer wool (which can be worn on cool days over a black crepe dress which she already has).

Costume suit of black and beige print combining a dress and jacket. (The dress may also be worn under the black coat.)

Black straw hat with a beige wing.

Two softly tailored frocks of the spectator sports type—one dusty blue, the other gray green to be worn at the shore.

Short loose casual coat of beige wool that can top both the print and the spectator sports dresses.

Soft muted green and white printed chiffon dinner frock.

Star of all the wardrobe in Miss Dignam's mother's mind is a short loose coat of emerald green taffeta which can top the chiffon dinner frock on festive night or can be worn to dinner over a black frock to brighten the landscape on evenings when she wants a little cheer.

In this wardrobe scarfs and fussy neckwear are banned as giving a fuddy look. Jewels are nearly always confined to a necklace and earrings of pearls.

Use of evergreens in rock garden

Rock gardens should be "well dressed" the year around. This can be achieved through the use of dwarf evergreens. Such evergreens not only add interest to a rock garden, but they also give it an air of permanence. There are many places where dwarf evergreens can be used to advantage, especially in the background and at the sides of steps leading to the rock garden.

Three forms of dwarf evergreens suitable for rock garden use are shown in the accompanying sketch. Figure 1 shows the creeping or spreading type of evergreens; Figure 2, the half-erect or semi-erect type, and Figure 3, the round or globular form.

The creeping types, Juniperus Sargenti and J. Horizontalis, are especially useful for planting amid rocks.

Juniperus Sabina and J. Chinensis Pfitzeriana belong in the semi-erect group, since their habit of growth is both upright and spreading. Thuga occidentalis Woodwardi and Taxus cuspidata nana are compact in growth and dark green in color. They belong to the globular group.

Sisters Killed in Automobile Crash

Helen, W. Va., May 13 (AP)—Lettie Mae Weddle, 21, and Grace Marie Weddle, 19, Sophia sisters, were killed Sunday when an automobile in which nine persons were riding collided with the tender of a locomotive.

Both were thrown through the windshield of the car and one was decapitated.

State Trooper C. H. Padden said the other seven persons in the car were injured, none seriously. The mining camp here is about 15 miles from Beckley.

Declares Neutrality Is Only "Fiction"

Buenos Aires, Argentina, May 13 (AP) — Declaring neutrality in present circumstances of the world a "fiction" and a "dead conception," Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantile has proposed that the Americas adopt a "non-belligerent" attitude instead.

The foreign minister's statement was made after a conference among Cantilo, President Ortiz, United States Ambassador Norman Armour and the Brazilian ambassador.

The statement had been hinted at earlier in a dispatch from Washington, printed in La Nacion, which said consideration was being given to a new declaration of solidarity by the Americas which would scrap the declaration of neutrality at Panama for something resembling Italy's non-belligerent status.

The situation in which belligerents do not recognize the rights, as well as the duties, of neutrals, and the "aggressive methods" in Europe, Cantilo said, show the need for a "stronger stand" than neutrality.

He denied it would "mean bringing us nearer to war."

The sixty-six foot width of many country roads today was determined over 300 years ago by Edmund Hunter, who invented the original surveyor's chain.

When You Take a Walk, Follow Your Toes

Cure for Warts Is Discussed By Physician

Explanation Is Given on Treatment by Mental Suggestion

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What is the treatment of warts?

This was the subject of discussion of about fifty physicians at a recent meeting of the Academy of Dermatology in Philadelphia. This shows that the seemingly trivial problem is one that is by no means as easy at it looks. Some cases of warts are very easy to cure; others will tax the resourcefulness of the skin specialist to the limit. About half the cases of juvenile warts, on people below the age of fifteen, can be cured without treatment.

Since so many warts can be cured by suggestion, this is the explanation of time-honored methods of rubbing the warts with a piece of meat and then burying the meat under an apple tree on a moon light night, rubbing the wart with a cut apple licked with the tongue, etc.

The suggestion treatment consists in painting the warts with an entirely inert coloring fluid. The patient is told very impressively that as long as any traces of color is visible the warts are not to be touched. The complete disappearance of the warts occurs in four to eight weeks with this innocuous treatment in favorable cases.

The best form of physical treatment is by the x-ray. Simple applications of certain ointments are often very efficacious.

Diet Is Helpful

What is the diet used to prevent epileptic seizures?

The diet is a high-fat diet, low in starch and sugar, known as the "ketogenic diet." It is considered by many who have had experience with epilepsy that convulsions can be controlled better with this diet than with the use of drugs. In cases in which it works, which amount to about 50 per cent of patients, it works beautifully. It is especially valuable in children.

It is possible for patients in any walk of life to learn this diet and adhere to it rigidly. We have records of laborers who have learned the diet and who have carried it out over a period of years. Young children offer the most difficult problem, because in many instances it is impossible to make them understand the importance of rigid adherence to the routine: Many of them will steal candy or sweets and, of course, spoil the state of ketosis.

Other children learn very early the importance of rigid adherence. Dr. Thomas Marks, of Lexington, Ky., tells a most illuminating story of one of his little patients who had been on the diet for several months. This boy came into a corner drug store with three of his playmates. The playmates each bought an ice cream cone, and this little fellow showed no inclination to obtain one. A traveling man standing in the store noticed that the boy did not have a cone and, feeling sorry for him, suggested that he would be glad to buy one for the child. The boy looked up at him and said "Thanks, Mister, but I wouldn't eat one of them things for fifty dollars. I would be sure to have a fit tonight if I did."

Questions and Answers

Q.: "What can be eaten to improve splitting finger nails? Does buttermilk contain calcium? Are calcium tablets harmful in any way and would they help brittle nails?"

Answe—Food has little to do with the causation of brittle nails. Vitamin-deficient diet may tend in this direction but we have little experimental proof of this. Buttermilk does contain calcium. Calcium is not helpful in brittle nails. Brittle nails are, in most cases, due to an infection, either by ringworm or other fungus of yeast, of some germ.

Germans Threaten Drastic Reprisals

Berlin, May 13 (AP)—Authoritative German sources have warned the enemy that every "ill-treatment of parachute soldiers and every act against them in violation of international law will result in prompt, sharpest counter-measures."

(French Premier Reynaud alleged in Paris that the Germans were violating international law, charging they were dropping parachute soldiers in Dutch and Belgian uniforms. A communique from his office warned that instructions have been issued for the instant shooting of any "enemy combatants captured in France who are not wearing their national uniform.")

The German statement was issued, it was said, because enemy propaganda not only urges civilians to act against parachutists by every means possible but also shows that "certain officials" are considering treating them as spies.

Declares Neutrality Is Only "Fiction"

Buenos Aires, Argentina, May 13 (AP) — Declaring neutrality in present circumstances of the world a "fiction" and a "dead conception," Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantile has proposed that the Americas adopt a "non-belligerent" attitude instead.

The foreign minister's statement was made after a conference among Cantilo, President Ortiz, United States Ambassador Norman Armour and the Brazilian ambassador.

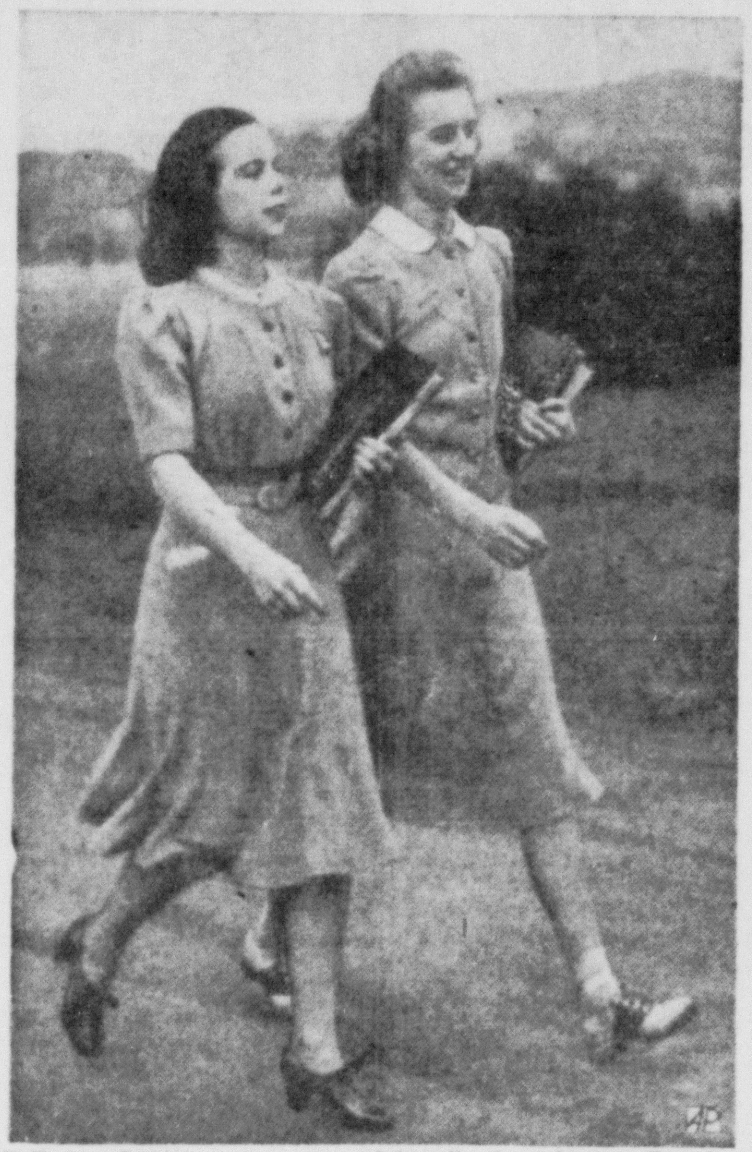
The statement had been hinted at earlier in a dispatch from Washington, printed in La Nacion, which said consideration was being given to a new declaration of solidarity by the Americas which would scrap the declaration of neutrality at Panama for something resembling Italy's non-belligerent status.

The situation in which belligerents do not recognize the rights, as well as the duties, of neutrals, and the "aggressive methods" in Europe, Cantilo said, show the need for a "stronger stand" than neutrality.

He denied it would "mean bringing us nearer to war."

The sixty-six foot width of many country roads today was determined over 300 years ago by Edmund Hunter, who invented the original surveyor's chain.

When You Take a Walk, Follow Your Toes



(AP) Feature Service

Lead with your toes for correct walking. These New Jersey College for Women girls demonstrate the right and wrong way to walk, in their rehearsal for National Posture week, May 6-11. The girl at the left walks the right way: Toes first, knees relaxed, chest high, back straight, abdomen contracted and shoulders comfortably back and level. Her companion moves incorrectly, leading with her heel, with knees stiff.

Cure for Warts Is Discussed By Physician

Explanation Is Given on Treatment by Mental Suggestion

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What is the treatment of warts?

This was the subject of discussion of about fifty physicians at a recent meeting of the Academy of Dermatology in Philadelphia. This shows that the seemingly trivial problem is one that is by no means as easy at it looks. Some cases of warts are very easy to cure; others will tax the resourcefulness of the skin specialist to the limit. About half the cases of juvenile warts, on people below the age of fifteen, can be cured without treatment.

Since so many warts can be cured by suggestion, this is the explanation of time-honored methods of rubbing the warts with a piece of meat and then burying the meat under an apple tree on a moon light night, rubbing the wart with a cut apple licked with the tongue, etc.

The suggestion treatment consists in painting the warts with an entirely inert coloring fluid. The patient is told very impressively that as long as any traces of color is visible the warts are not to be touched. The complete disappearance of the warts occurs in four to eight weeks with this innocuous treatment in favorable cases.

The best form of physical treatment is by the x-ray. Simple applications of certain ointments are often very efficacious.

Diet Is Helpful

What is the diet used to prevent epileptic seizures?

The diet is a high-fat diet, low in starch and sugar, known as the "ketogenic diet." It is considered by many who have had experience with epilepsy that convulsions can be controlled better with this diet than with the use of drugs. In cases in which it works, which amount to about 50 per cent of patients, it works beautifully. It is especially valuable in children.

It is possible for patients in any walk of life to learn this diet and adhere to it rigidly. We have records of laborers who have learned the diet and who have carried it out over a period of years. Young children offer the most difficult problem, because in many instances it is impossible to make them understand the importance of rigid adherence to the routine. Many of them will steal candy or sweets and, of course, spoil the state of ketosis.

Other children learn very early the importance of rigid adherence. Dr. Thomas Marks, of Lexington, Ky., tells a most illuminating story of one of his little patients who had been on the diet for several months. This boy came into a corner drug store with three of his playmates. The playmates each bought an ice cream cone, and this little fellow showed no inclination to obtain one. A traveling man standing in the store noticed that the boy did not have a cone and, feeling sorry for him, suggested that he would be glad to buy one for the child. The boy looked up at him and said "Thanks, Mister, but I wouldn't eat one of them things for fifty dollars. I would be sure to have a fit tonight if I did."

Questions and Answers

Q.: "What can be eaten to improve splitting finger nails? Does buttermilk contain calcium? Are calcium tablets harmful in any way and would they help brittle nails?"

Answe—Food has little to do with the causation of brittle nails. Vitamin-deficient diet may tend in this direction but we have little experimental proof of this. Buttermilk does contain calcium. Calcium is not helpful in brittle nails. Brittle nails are, in most cases, due to an infection, either by ringworm or other fungus of yeast, of some germ.

Germans Threaten Drastic Reprisals

Berlin, May 13 (AP)—Authoritative German sources have warned the enemy that every "ill-treatment of parachute soldiers and every act against them in violation of international law will result in prompt, sharpest counter-measures."

(French Premier Reynaud alleged in Paris that the Germans were violating international law, charging they were dropping parachute soldiers in Dutch and Belgian uniforms. A communique from his office warned that instructions have been issued for the instant shooting of any "enemy combatants captured in France who are not wearing their national uniform.")

The German statement was issued, it was said, because enemy propaganda not only urges civilians to act against parachutists by every means possible but also shows that "certain officials" are considering treating them as spies.

Happiness, C.O.D.

by OREN ARNOLD

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:

BENJAMIN MERRIFIELD, aged capitalist, hires

GAYLE DIXON to make love to his grandson,

JEREMY TUCKER, a shy student of archeology.

YESTERDAY: Jeremy is induced to take part in the rehearsal for a play the young people are planning to give, and soon finds himself being invited to kiss Gayle.

CHAPTER TEN

MR. JEREMY TUCKER, scholar and savant, discovered a cosmic phenomenon.

It was written away back before Caesar's time, even, that kisses are significant; and being broadly read, Mr. Tucker knew about them in a purely hypothetical sense. Nevertheless, kisses and pretty girls alike were vague concepts in his consciousness.

There had been co-eds at the college he attended. Some had even been scholarly, winning Phi Beta Kappa keys as he himself had done, and Jeremy felt that they were to be respected. In short, he would have admitted that women are biologically essential to this earth.

But that wasn't the idea this morning.

This cosmic phenomenon he suddenly discovered was, specifically, that he himself could kiss a beautiful girl, kiss her right on her red lips for no high purpose save pleasure. And, oh yes, for drama's sake. He was supposed to be acting.

That's what shocked him. When he kissed Gayle Dixon there, he forgot all about the drama. Despite his earnestness, his attention was focused on the fact that her lips were soft and yielding; that her arms and shoulders, while slender, were still rounded in the most esthetic possible way; and that Gayle had a scent about her which, however disturbing, was the most potent force of all.

He drew his head back to stare at her, close range, as if she were a sudden new specimen in his laboratory. He still held her close to him.

Gayle just had to do something about it, eventually.

"You wish—you want to run through it again?" she inquired. "We do both need a lot of rehearsal, I suppose."

He wasn't thinking of that. But it was an idea.

Gayle said her short speech, which was the hero's cue to kiss her and pour out his love, and again Jeremy took the cue.

He kissed her a second time, and the exaltation of it did not fade.

But he quite forgot the after-speech he was supposed to read. It is doubtful if he could have read anything, in fact. The script he held quivered. Bill Bailey, acting as director from out in the middle of the big room, noticed that.

For want of something else to do, Jeremy then kissed Gayle a third time. This time he was not nearly so fluttery about it, although he did it hastily and seemed to come to his senses all at once and drop his arms guiltily. Gayle never imagined that a man could blush so deeply pink. She herself was flustered by it.

Then all at once Jeremy realized what he had done.

Full force of the cosmic phenomenon seemed to strike him. He stared at Gayle—at Gayle's lips.

"Oh!" he suddenly cried. Distress shone on him. "I've—I've got to—oh, excuse me!"

Without further ado he turned and fled. He ran to the nearest exit. He almost tore through a door onto the sun porch, but he didn't stop there. He ran right on to the lawn and disappeared in a clump of shrubbery.

For an ageless moment Gayle stared after him.

Bill Bailey, too, was staring, his legs spread apart, his script in one hand and the other hand on a hip.

"If that Tucker was hit as hard as I think he was, he'll be competition," Bill told himself.

Finally Bill murmured, "Well, I'll be cock-eyed damned!" It was an unlovely profanity for Bill Bailey, who despised all cursing, and so it was just as well that Gayle couldn't hear it.

Happiness seemed to have drifted off up the chimney that day, so far as William Bailey was concerned.

Work of the drama kept on, after a fashion, but he had no heart for it. The morning had waned anyway, and Gayle said she would go freshen up a bit before lunch. Lunch in the Merrifield mansion was served promptly at 12.

So Bill just sat there on his box for a while.

A casual observer would have thought him studying the script for "Maid to Measure," which was in reality a clever three-act play, full of bright dialogue and snappy love-action. It was ideally suited to youth, a story of springtime and gaiety and music.

Even now Graham, the butler, came in to say that the piano tuner had arrived. "Okay," said Bill, although he said it not like Bill Bailey, but like a coroner who had come to view a body.

He went with the tuner to the Merrifield grand, conferred briefly about it, and told the man to do his worst.

"You mean my best," the tuner corrected, affably.

"Yeah," said Bill.

Tempe Hyde came in then.

"When do you want us to start acting, Bill?"

"Huh? Oh. Oh, after lunch, I guess. Yeah, after lunch."

"Bill?" said Tempe, quietly.

"Huh?"

"That girl you took upstairs last night and were nice to, the one who cried in the car—she is ever so grateful."

"Okay."

"I mean—she is! She thinks you are grand, Bill."

"Okay."

"Goodness! You sound like bad news. I'm trying to tell you that all of us girls think you are pretty swell, and we are ever so grateful for your kindness, and grateful to Mr. Merrifield, and—"

"Nillo to all that."

He walked away from her then, and he was half way up the stairs toward his own room before he realized he had been rude. He, Bill Bailey, was never rude intentionally. He had been a popular athlete in school, sought after, courted everywhere. He despised rude people. He wondered what in the devil he had meant, being rude to cute little Tempe.

He started back downstairs to find her and apologize, but she was already back with the other five girls on the sun porch. There was a deal of hearty laughter. Bill realized it wouldn't be a moment to apologize to anyone.

He turned again and went on to his room. Inside he plumped down on his bed and started to re-read the script of "Maid to Measure, a Romantic Comedy in Three Acts and Five Scenes."

But in a moment his mind was wandering, along with his eyes. His eyes had shifted so as to view the ceiling. His mind was re-creating the scene he had directed on the improvised stage downstairs.

Jeremy Tucker had kissed Gayle, really.

It amounted to nothing, really.

Absolutely nothing. Jeremy was just flustered. But he had kissed her, twice more than necessary—ardently.

Bill Bailey tried reasoning with himself. He told himself that he ought, if anything, to have been amused, to have laughed out loud then and there. It's what he would have done normally. Laughed, and kidded both Gayle and Jeremy, and let the incident pass for the trivial thing it was. He knew, even now, that Gayle thought nothing of it, however embarrassed Jeremy was when he fled.

But Bill couldn't dismiss it that way. He just couldn't. His mind refused to phrase it, but his heart would not be budged; he knew, deep in himself, that in a scant 24 hours he had fallen in love. He knew it the instant he saw the other man kiss her.

"If that Tucker was hit as hard as I think he was, he'll be competition," Bill told himself. "I ought to have cracked him one—him standing there kissing her like—like—like a—"

He couldn't quite finish it. Hatred was a thing foreign to Bill Bailey. He wasn't good at it. Anyway, he was not only angry, he was sadly confused; committed to help make Jeremy fall for Gayle, Bill himself had done the falling. Besides which, there was the promised check for $10,000 if things came out as old Mr. Merrifield wanted them to.

Life can find diabolical ways of kicking a fellow around.

Bruce To Resign As Commiteeman

Baltimore, May 13. (AP)—Howard Bruce, defeated in the Democratic senatorial primary, says he has been Democratic National Committeeman "for nearly fifteen years and that is long enough for anybody."

"I have made no secret for many months past that whether nominated or defeated I did not wish to remain Democratic National Committeeman," he said.

Bruce did not amplify the statement.

Senator Millard E. Tydings, who backed the successful campaign of Senator George L. Radcliffe for renomination, said that Bruce's statement was "all news to me.

"I didn't know how he felt. I have not been in touch with him since the election and I have not talked with anybody about it x x x.

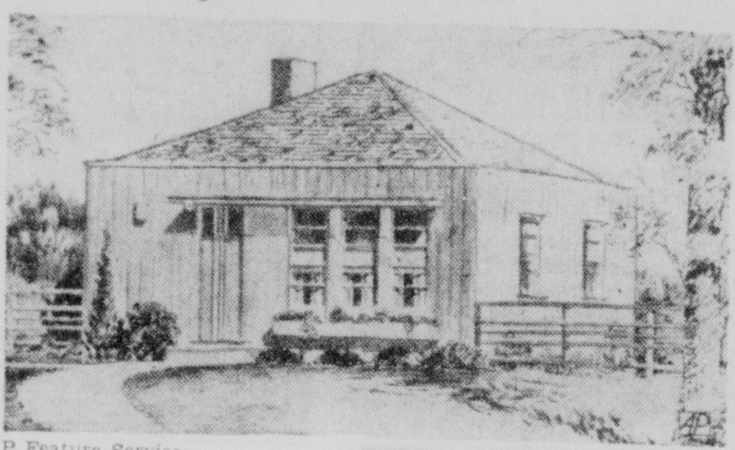
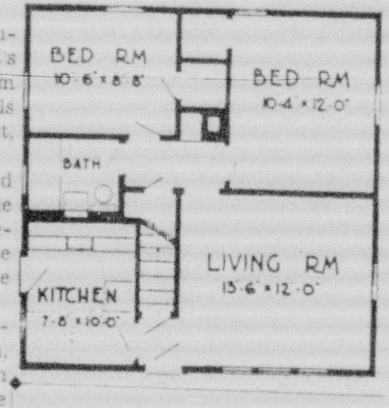
A House for Honeymooners On a 25-Square-Foot Plan



AP Feature Service

Here's a house for a young couple starting out. The architect's prospectus calls it a "minimum house"—but it has all the essentials of graceful living at lowest cost, plus a definite charm of its own.



The honeymoon home is finished in vertical wood siding. Two ample bedrooms, living room with fireplace, and plenty of kitchen space are included in its 25-foot-square floor plan.

The grouped front windows, cross-ventilation in the master bedroom, and the suggested natural finish are niceties of conception. The home will fit on a very small lot.

The cost in Washington, D. C., should be around $3,000. Local lending agencies have full information on the Federal Home Building plan, which supervises construction.

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

THE CHARACTERS:

BENJAMIN MERRIFIELD, aged capitalist, hires

GAYLE DIXON to make love to his grandson,

JEREMY TUCKER, a shy student of archeology.

YESTERDAY: Jeremy is induced to take part in the rehearsal for a play the young people are planning to give, and soon finds himself being invited to kiss Gayle.

CHAPTER TEN

MR. JEREMY TUCKER, scholar and savant, discovered a cosmic phenomenon.

It was written away back before Caesar's time, even, that kisses are significant; and being broadly read, Mr. Tucker knew about them in a purely hypothetical sense. Nevertheless, kisses and pretty girls alike were vague concepts in his consciousness.

There had been co-eds at the college he attended. Some had even been scholarly, winning Phi Beta Kappa keys as he himself had done, and Jeremy felt that they were to be respected. In short, he would have admitted that women are biologically essential to this earth.

But that wasn't the idea this morning.

This cosmic phenomenon he suddenly discovered was, specifically, that he himself could kiss a beautiful girl, kiss her right on her red lips for no high purpose save pleasure. And, oh yes, for drama's sake. He was supposed to be acting.

That's what shocked him. When he kissed Gayle Dixon there, he forgot all about the drama. Despite his earnestness, his attention was focused on the fact that her lips were soft and yielding; that her arms and shoulders, while slender, were still rounded in the most esthetic possible way; and that Gayle had a scent about her which, however disturbing, was the most potent force of all.

He drew his head back to stare at her, close range, as if she were a sudden new specimen in his laboratory. He still held her close to him.

Gayle just had to do something about it, eventually.

"You wish—you want to run through it again?" she inquired. "We do both need a lot of rehearsal, I suppose."

He wasn't thinking of that. But it was an idea.

Gayle said her short speech, which was the hero's cue to kiss her and pour out his love, and again Jeremy took the cue.

He kissed her a second time, and the exaltation of it did not fade.

But he quite forgot the after-speech he was supposed to read. It is doubtful if he could have read anything, in fact. The script he held quivered. Bill Bailey, acting as director from out in the middle of the big room, noticed that.

For want of something else to do, Jeremy then kissed Gayle a third time. This time he was not nearly so fluttery about it, although he did it hastily and seemed to come to his senses all at once and drop his arms guiltily. Gayle never imagined that a man could blush so deeply pink. She herself was flustered by it.

Then all at once Jeremy realized what he had done.

Full force of the cosmic phenomenon seemed to strike him. He stared at Gayle—at Gayle's lips.

"Oh!" he suddenly cried. Distress shone on him. "I've—I've got to—oh, excuse me!"

Without further ado he turned and fled. He ran to the nearest exit. He almost tore through a door onto the sun porch, but he didn't stop there. He ran right on to the lawn and disappeared in a clump of shrubbery.

For an ageless moment Gayle stared after him.

Bill Bailey, too, was staring, his legs spread apart, his script in one hand and the other hand on a hip.

"If that Tucker was hit as hard as I think he was, he'll be competition," Bill told himself.

Finally Bill murmured, "Well, I'll be cock-eyed damned!" It was an unlovely profanity for Bill Bailey, who despised all cursing, and so it was just as well that Gayle couldn't hear it.

Happiness seemed to have drifted off up the chimney that day, so far as William Bailey was concerned.

Work of the drama kept on, after a fashion, but he had no heart for it. The morning had waned anyway, and Gayle said she would go freshen up a bit before lunch. Lunch in the Merrifield mansion was served promptly at 12.

So Bill just sat there on his box for a while.

A casual observer would have thought him studying the script for "Maid to Measure," which was in reality a clever three-act play, full of bright dialogue and snappy love-action. It was ideally suited to youth, a story of springtime and gaiety and music.

Even now Graham, the butler, came in to say that the piano tuner had arrived. "Okay," said Bill, although he said it not like Bill Bailey, but like a coroner who had come to view a body.

He went with the tuner to the Merrifield grand, conferred briefly about it, and told the man to do his worst.

"You mean my best," the tuner corrected, affably.

"Yeah," said Bill.

Tempe Hyde came in then.

"When do you want us to start acting, Bill?"

"Huh? Oh. Oh, after lunch, I guess. Yeah, after lunch."

"Bill?" said Tempe, quietly.

"Huh?"

"That girl you took upstairs last night and were nice to, the one who cried in the car—she is ever so grateful."

"Okay."

"I mean—she is! She thinks you are grand, Bill."

"Okay."

"Goodness! You sound like bad news. I'm trying to tell you that all of us girls think you are pretty swell, and we are ever so grateful for your kindness, and grateful to Mr. Merrifield, and—"

"Nillo to all that."

He walked away from her then, and he was half way up the stairs toward his own room before he realized he had been rude. He, Bill Bailey, was never rude intentionally. He had been a popular athlete in school, sought after, courted everywhere. He despised rude people. He wondered what in the devil he had meant, being rude to cute little Tempe.

He started back downstairs to find her and apologize, but she was already back with the other five girls on the sun porch. There was a deal of hearty laughter. Bill realized it wouldn't be a moment to apologize to anyone.

He turned again and went on to his room. Inside he plumped down on his bed and started to re-read the script of "Maid to Measure, a Romantic Comedy in Three Acts and Five Scenes."

But in a moment his mind was wandering, along with his eyes. His eyes had shifted so as to view the ceiling. His mind was re-creating the scene he had directed on the improvised stage downstairs.

Jeremy Tucker had kissed Gayle, really.

It amounted to nothing, really.

Absolutely nothing. Jeremy was just flustered. But he had kissed her, twice more than necessary—ardently.

Bill Bailey tried reasoning with himself. He told himself that he ought, if anything, to have been amused, to have laughed out loud then and there. It's what he would have done normally. Laughed, and kidded both Gayle and Jeremy, and let the incident pass for the trivial thing it was. He knew, even now, that Gayle thought nothing of it, however embarrassed Jeremy was when he fled.

But Bill couldn't dismiss it that way. He just couldn't. His mind refused to phrase it, but his heart would not be budged; he knew, deep in himself, that in a scant 24 hours he had fallen in love. He knew it the instant he saw the other man kiss her.

"If that Tucker was hit as hard as I think he was, he'll be competition," Bill told himself. "I ought to have cracked him one—him standing there kissing her like—like—like a—"

He couldn't quite finish it. Hatred was a thing foreign to Bill Bailey. He wasn't good at it. Anyway, he was not only angry, he was sadly confused; committed to help make Jeremy fall for Gayle, Bill himself had done the falling. Besides which, there was the promised check for $10,000 if things came out as old Mr. Merrifield wanted them to.

Life can find diabolical ways of kicking a fellow around.

Bruce To Resign As Commiteeman

Baltimore, May 13. (AP)—Howard Bruce, defeated in the Democratic senatorial primary, says he has been Democratic National Committeeman "for nearly fifteen years and that is long enough for anybody."

Bruce did not amplify the statement.

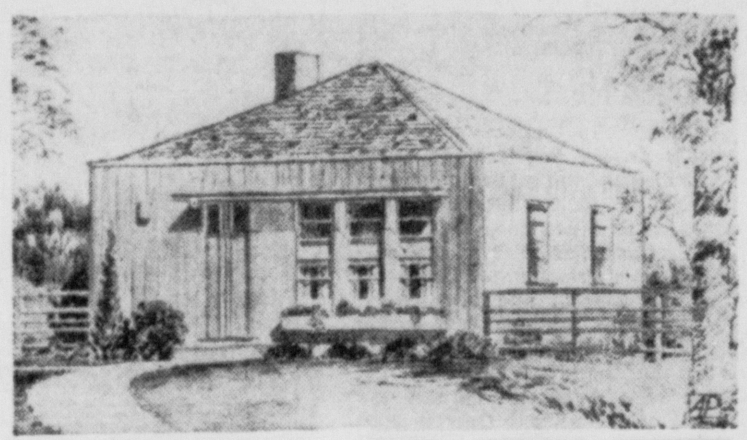
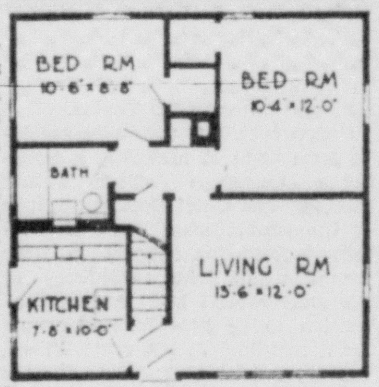
A House for Honeymooners On a 25-Square-Foot Plan



AP Feature Service



Here's a house for a young couple starting out. The architect's prospectus calls it a "minimum house"—but it has all the essentials of graceful living at lowest cost, plus a definite charm of its own.

The honeymoon home is finished in vertical wood siding. Two ample bedrooms, living room with fireplace, and plenty of kitchen space are included in its 25-foot-square floor plan.

The grouped front windows, cross-ventilation in the master bedroom, and the suggested natural finish are niceties of conception. The home will fit on a very small lot.

The cost in Washington, D. C., should be around $3,000. Local lending agencies have full information on the Federal Home Building plan, which supervises construction.

Professor A. C. Haddon of Cambridge University said all mankind can be divided into three kinds—wooly, wavy and straight hair.

Gontrum Rules on Sale of Fireworks

Baltimore, May 13. (AP) — In the interests of a "safe and sane" Fourth of July, State Insurance Commissioner John B. Gontrum issued today a list of regulations governing the sale, display, possession and manufacture of fireworks in Maryland.

Gontrum said he had received cooperation of Maryland fireworks manufacturers, but added that the regulations did not cover types of explosives that may be barred completely.

Displays of fireworks for sale purposes are banned from all highways, streets, sidewalks and public places, "or within one hundred feet of same," and the regulation requires a permit from the insurance commissioner to manufacture, store or sell such explosives.

Gontrum said he hoped to announce soon a list of fireworks that will be banned for sale or use.

Negro Hunted in Frederick Swindle

Frederick, Md., May 13 (AP)—A smooth-talking negro, who allegedly flim-flammed Margaret H. Brown, Frederick county negress, out of $1,000 in cash, was sought today by state police.

Corp. C. W. Magaha quoted the woman as saying the money represented part of a life insurance policy she collected after her husband was killed recently.

Early today, she reported, a well-dressed negro, driving a 1940 automobile and accompanied by a woman in nurse's uniform, came to her home and discussed the insurance policy. She said the man told her she had not received as much as she should and that the "government might be able to get her some more.

He suggested that she leave the matter in his hands and give him money to hire a lawyer to fight the case.

Magaha said she went to the bank, drew out $1,000, and gave it to the woman accompanying the man. After their departure, she became suspicious, and reported to police.

Arrangements Are Completed For Big Event

Three Day Celebration Will Get Under Way Friday May 17

Frostburg, May 13—All the committees of Frostburg Lodge No. 470, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, in charge of arrangements for the official opening of Frostburg's new Elks' home, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 17, 18 and 19, met Sunday and completed plans for the event which the lodge considers the most important in the history of the organization since it was founded forty-one years ago.

Flanigan To Speak

It was disclosed that the grand lodge will be represented at the dedication ceremony Sunday, May 19, by E. Leister Mobley, Hagerstown, district deputy, grand exalted ruler, and that the principal address in connection with the dedication ceremony will be delivered by John A. Flanigan, Baltimore, a past exalted ruler of Baltimore Lodge No. 7, B. P. O. Elks.

The entertainment committee, headed by Dr. W. O. McLane, has secured professional and amateur entertainers, the Little German Band and other attractions for the various social functions to be held during the three days' festivities.

The officers and various committees will present plans at the regular meeting of the lodge Tuesday night for having the building decorated, providing rooms for the visitors in the homes of the community, securing free parking for the motor cars of out-of-town Elks and arranging transportation for the visitors to the Celanese Plant, the German Brewery and various historical points of interest in Allegany and Garrett counties.

To Decorate Building

Workmen completed the recreation room in the basement of the new home Saturday and the entire building will undergo a thorough house cleaning before the decorations are put up Thursday for the big event.

Delegations from practically every lodge in Maryland, Washington, D. C., Connellsville and Uniontown, Pa., have made reservations and it is expected that scores of visitors will be here from Keyser and Piedmont, W. Va., and the Georges Creek towns, all of which are in the jurisdiction of Frostburg Lodge, No. 470.

Council Proceedings

Walter Powell, newly elected police commissioner, reported at a special meeting of the Mayor and City Commissioners tonight that many motorists' cars are being tagged for parking without placing a coin in the city parking meters, tear up the tags and fail to appear for a hearing.

Tags, according to Commissioner Powell, have been thrown about the streets by the hundreds. The whole business he said has become more or less a joke.

It was plainly evident that his report was a shock to the council and instructions were given to have special notices printed at once informing all persons who fail to appear for a hearing when their cars are tagged, will result in having a warrant sworn out for their arrest.

It was suggested by Mayor Glen Gunnett that the police commissioner use the same type of car used by the Cumberland police department and adopt the Cumberland plan of forcing offending motorists to obey the city's parking ordinance.

The council granted a request of the Frostburg Elks to allow visiting Elks free parking space May 17, 18 and 19. This permission will be granted to all cars officially designated with tags issued by the Frostburg Lodge.

Water Commissioner William Lemmert was authorized to purchase sufficient two inch pipe to lay a water main on Eckhart Flat for the twelve water consumers of the Frostburg Water Company who must connect with the city lines by July 1.

It was also decided to lay a new

Negro Hunted in Frederick Swindle

Frederick, Md., May 13 (AP)—A smooth-talking negro, who allegedly flim-flammed Margaret H. Brown, Frederick county negress, out of $1,000 in cash, was sought today by state police.

Corp. C. W. Magaha quoted the woman as saying the money represented part of a life insurance policy she collected after her husband was killed recently.

Early today, she reported, a well-dressed negro, driving a 1940 automobile and accompanied by a woman in nurse's uniform, came to her home and discussed the insurance policy. She said the man told her she had not received as much as she should and that the "government might be able to get her some more.

He suggested that she leave the matter in his hands and give him money to hire a lawyer to fight the case.

Magaha said she went to the bank, drew out $1,000, and gave it to the woman accompanying the man. After their departure, she became suspicious, and reported to police.

Arrangements Are Completed For Big Event

Three Day Celebration Will Get Under Way Friday May 17

Frostburg, May 13—All the committees of Frostburg Lodge No. 470, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, in charge of arrangements for the official opening of Frostburg's new Elks' home, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 17, 18 and 19, met Sunday and completed plans for the event which the lodge considers the most important in the history of the organization since it was founded forty-one years ago.

Flanigan To Speak

It was disclosed that the grand lodge will be represented at the dedication ceremony Sunday, May 19, by E. Leister Mobley, Hagerstown, district deputy, grand exalted ruler, and that the principal address in connection with the dedication ceremony will be delivered by John A. Flanigan, Baltimore, a past exalted ruler of Baltimore Lodge No. 7, B. P. O. Elks.

The entertainment committee, headed by Dr. W. O. McLane, has secured professional and amateur entertainers, the Little German Band and other attractions for the various social functions to be held during the three days' festivities.

The officers and various committees will present plans at the regular meeting of the lodge Tuesday night for having the building decorated, providing rooms for the visitors in the homes of the community, securing free parking for the motor cars of out-of-town Elks and arranging transportation for the visitors to the Celanese Plant, the German Brewery and various historical points of interest in Allegany and Garrett counties.

Workmen completed the recreation room in the basement of the new home Saturday and the entire building will undergo a thorough house cleaning before the decorations are put up Thursday for the big event.

Delegations from practically every lodge in Maryland, Washington, D. Council Proceedings

Walter Powell, newly elected police commissioner, reported at a special meeting of the Mayor and City Commissioners tonight that many motorists' cars are being tagged for parking without placing a coin in the city parking meters, tear up the tags and fail to appear for a hearing.

Tags, according to Commissioner Powell, have been thrown about the streets by the hundreds. The whole business he said has become more or less a joke.

It was plainly evident that his report was a shock to the council and instructions were given to have special notices printed at once informing all persons who fail to appear for a hearing when their cars are tagged, will result in having a warrant sworn out for their arrest.

It was suggested by Mayor Glen Gunnett that the police commissioner use the same type of car used by the Cumberland police department and adopt the Cumberland plan of forcing offending motorists to obey the city's parking ordinance.

The council granted a request of the Frostburg Elks to allow visiting Elks free parking space May 17, 18 and 19. This permission will be granted to all cars officially designated with tags issued by the Frostburg Lodge.

Water Commissioner William Lemmert was authorized to purchase sufficient two inch pipe to lay a water main on Eckhart Flat for the twelve water consumers of the Frostburg Water Company who must connect with the city lines by July 1.

Army Pinsters Take Saints' Mixed Title

Army pin spillers, who made a poor showing in the second half race of the SS. Peter & Paul Mixed League after winning the first half crown, regained some of their early season form to defeat Holy Cross, second half winner in the rolloff match last week on the Saint lanes.

The Cadets took the match by 63 pins, winning two of the three games. Army won the first game, 689 to 646, dropped the second 654-642 and copped the final, 669 to 637. Herman Grabenstein led the winners' assault with a 395 score while Johnny Briner of the vanquished team carried away rolloff honors with a 413 set. The summaries:

Stocks Register Biggest Drop in Months with Some Off Nine Points

European War Developments Have Adverse Effect on Prices

New York, May 13 (AP)—Financial markets toppled today, with stocks beaten down 2 to more than 9 points, as Wall street sentiment turned bearish on European war developments.

The Associated Press average of sixty issues fell 2.7 points to 45.8, biggest drop for a single day since Nov. 19, 1937. The composite touched a new low since Aug. 24, last year. Transfers of 2,557,790 shares were the largest since Sept. 13, 1939.

The morning relapse was blamed partly on the unloading of impaired Dutch margin accounts by brokers who were unable to get in touch with Amsterdam customers. In addition, some liquidation from other foreign sources was reported.

On top of this, speculative forces that follow the market chart lines were said to have run out because of the fact the industrial average went through the January low resistance level and this was taken as a definite selling signal.

Business news was favorable in spots, but for the most part was ignored. Even an unexpected estimated jump in this week's steel mill operations failed as a stimulant.

Principal losers were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, American Airlines, Douglas Aircraft, Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber, American Telephone, Anaconda, American Smelting, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Loft and International Paper preferred.

In the curb Aluminum of America was off 15, Great Atlantic & Pacific 12½ and Aluminum Ltd., 12. Losers of 1 to 5 or so were Bell Aircraft, E. W. Bliss, Niles-Bement-Pond and Babcock & Wilcox. The turnover here was around 480,000 shares against 366,000 Friday.

Theaters Today

Dancers Will Appear On Strand Stage

Harry Clark's new 1940 stage offering, "The Oomph Parade", will be the flesh part of the performance at the Strand theater for two days starting tomorrow.

The production is said to have plenty of top-notch dancing interspersed throughout its routine, perhaps the outstanding being the work of the Four Masterdons, an adagio foursome composed of three stalwart young men and a fairylike wisp of a girl who allows herself to be tossed around by her partners with the same ease they would toss a hand ball around. Every move, every toss, every catch has to be timed to the second for the slightest miss might cause the young lady to receive injury.

Other dancing features will be presented by Ann Gilmore, Leah Hasemeyer, the Perry Twins and the fifteen "Oomph models", whose eye appeal and real "Ooomph" is said to be only equalled by their charming performance.

The screen show will be "Opened By Mistake", a mystery story starring Charlie Ruggles, Janice Logan, Robert Paige and William Frawley.

The Strand's double-feature program, Zane Grey's "Light of Western Stars" and the Jones Family in "On Their Own", shows for the last times today.

Western Picture Is Booked at Maryland

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Twenty-Mule Team", starring Wallace Beery, will open Thursday at the Maryland theater. Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Rambeau, Alan Baxter and Noah Beery, Jr., will be seen in supporting roles.

Edward Small's "My Son, My Son", starring Madeleine Carroll, Brian Aherne and Louis Hayward, will continue at the Maryland today and tomorrow. In the supporting roles are Laraine Day, Henry Hull and Josephine Hutchinson.

Cartoon Feature Is Offered at Garden

Although most film fans think of the new "Gulliver's Travels" as the second full-length feature cartoon in the history of pitcures, Max Fleischer, its creator, made two others in the early days of his career. They were cartoon explanations of Professor Einstein's Theory or Relativity and Darwin's Theory of Evolution!

"Gulliver's Travels," the Technicolor film now at the Garden theater, the fourth cartoon feature to reach the screen. It was the first since Walt Disney's "Snow White" of two seasons ago.

"Gulliver's Travels" is based on the celebrated satire written by Dean Swift and takes the shipwrecked seafarer to the land of the thumb-high people of Lilliput.

Ona Munson, blonde dancing favorite of Broadway musical plays, has the leading feminine role with Victor McLaglen and Jackie Cooper in Universal's "The Big Guy," now at the Garden with Peggy Moran and Ed Brophy heading the supporting cast.

New Liberty Schedules Two Action Features

Romance and action in the timber country serve as background for "King of the Lumberjacks," Warner Brothers picture involving three characters caught in the stern country where you fight it out—or you don't.

In the film, which opens at the new Liberty theater tomorrow John Payne and Gloria Dickson share stellar honors with Stanley Fields in enacting this tale of rawboned drama, as vital as an ax blow.

John Payne, Gloria Dickson and Stanley Fields are in the supporting cast.

Heralded as a tribute to the gallantry of those men who brought law and order to the old west, Universal's "Riderh of Pasco Basin," starring Johnny Mack Brown, comes to the New Liberty tomorrow.

The story, declared to be historically authentic in its depiction of vigilantes in action, deals with the efforts of a band of swindlers, who try to promote a crooked irrigation project. Brown, as a young rodeo cowboy, takes up the fight when his friend, the publisher of the community's newspaper, is silenced by the gang's bullets.

Bob Baker, popular singing cowboy, enacts a top supporting role along with Fuzzy Knight, ace western comic. The romantic lead opposite Brown is played by Frances Robinson who appeared with the western star in "Desperate Trails."

Does He Really Love Her?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The young man I've been going with for the past year has told me that he loves me, but he never mentions marriage. At the present he is not employed, but he could, at least say something about the future, when things would be better for him. He has often said that he would never marry until he is able to take care of a wife. But I think I ought to be considered in the matter.

I have a very good position and would be able to keep on after we marry. If he would only say a word about marriage in the future, I should be content, and would feel like saving for the future. Other men don't seem to interest me at all. And wondering as I do, makes me feel miserable.

M.

The modern young woman does not accept her fate in this patient manner, and the days when love affairs drifted for years are happily past. I see no harm in intimating to this young man that some suggestion as to the future would be only fair to you both.

Jealousy Often a Cure

Dear Miss Fairfax:

In my second year at college, I'm very much in love with a girl with whom I have been going for nearly a year. I always thought she favored me, but lately she has been out several times with another boy at school. Although she lets me come to see her and take her out, I know as well as everyone else that she cares for this other boy more than she does for me.

Do you advise me dropping her, or shall I try to win her back?

M.A.C.

If you wouldn't worry so much about getting her back, you would be more likely to succeed in doing so. It's a sorry thing to say, but few young people value that of which they're certain. Pursuit exercises a sort of magic which, in later years, the normal men and women are glad to exchange for some sense of permanence and security.

Go about and make new friends, and if she sees how popular you are with other girls, this girl friend is more likely to want to have you back.

Old Wound Opened by Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

What would you do if you had a husband like mine? He's always reminding me that I made an unfortunate mistake before I met him. I was square enough with him to tell him about it, when he asked me to marry him, but his reply was that he loved me and didn't care. All I can say is "Well, dear, you know I told you about it, and you said you didn't care."

I'm 26, have been married six years, and have a daughter of four. I've always been a loving and faithful wife, and try to make him happy. The house is well kept and meals are on time.

He is a good husband in every other respect, but his sly remarks about this one false step hurt me worse than if he struck me, or was a heavy drinker. If he keeps this up, I shall surely hate him.

I was only a youngster of 16 when this unfortunate thing happened. I don't think I deserve such treatment from him. Do you?

JILL.

It was very square and honorable of you to tell your husband of this one lapse in your earlier life, and I don't believe he realizes how ungenerous is this constant reminder of something he should forget, as he forgave it when you told him.

To the Philippines

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I thought ours was a complete romance. We met, fell desperately in love, and planned to be married. But now he has been transferred to a new post in the Philippines and will have to stay two years. It isn't possible for me to follow him, so we cannot be married until he comes back, and it seems so long.

He is four years older than I am, and I am 20 years old. Do you think that's about the right difference? Would you advise me to wait for him?

M. R.

The fact that you raise the question of waiting for him makes me doubt if you really love this young man. If you cared enough I don't believe you'd have any misgivings, especially with this period of separation confronting you.

Why don't you just remain good friends and see how you feel when he comes home? Meantime, don't you think it would be wiser for both of you to be free?

Special Agent Retires

Bluefield, W. Va., May 13 (AP)—After thirty-two years of chasing railroad trespassing and petty thieves, A. R. Pittman figures he has earned a rest.

So he has retired to his old home town of Springfield, Ga.

Grandmother Is Going to College

Huntington, W. Va., May 13 (AP)—Mrs. E. F. Kincaid, a three-time grandmother who reared three sons and founded a home missionary society, who works in a pre-natal clinic and keeps house besides, found she had time on her hands, so she is going to college.

Mrs. Kincaid is a freshman in the college of arts and science at Marshall college. Her youngest son, Bill, is a sophomore.

She is not preparing herself for a career, she hastens to explain, "it is just that there are so many things I don't know and college is the best place for me to find out."

"I went to high school with my middle son, T. J., and was graduated with him in June, 1931. Bill was only ten then, and I thought that was as far as I could go. But the thing I couldn't forget was that there was so much more I could learn if I went to college."

"The most difficult thing new," Mrs. Kincaid confided, "is not the subjects or method of study, but the fact I've been resting mentally for nine years. I have had to learn to concentrate all over again."

Stocks Register Biggest Drop in Months with Some Off Nine Points

European War Developments Have Adverse Effect on Prices

New York, May 13 (AP)—Financial markets toppled today, with stocks beaten down 2 to more than 9 points, as Wall street sentiment turned bearish on European war developments.

The Associated Press average of sixty issues fell 2.7 points to 45.8, biggest drop for a single day since Nov. 19, 1937. The composite touched a new low since Aug. 24, last year. Transfers of 2,557,790 shares were the largest since Sept. 13, 1939.

The morning relapse was blamed partly on the unloading of impaired Dutch margin accounts by brokers who were unable to get in touch with Amsterdam customers. In addition, some liquidation from other foreign sources was reported.

On top of this, speculative forces that follow the market chart lines were said to have run out because of the fact the industrial average went through the January low resistance level and this was taken as a definite selling signal.

Business news was favorable in spots, but for the most part was ignored. Even an unexpected estimated jump in this week's steel mill operations failed as a stimulant.

Principal losers were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, American Airlines, Douglas Aircraft, Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber, American Telephone, Anaconda, American Smelting, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Loft and International Paper preferred.

In the curb Aluminum of America was off 15, Great Atlantic & Pacific 12½ and Aluminum Ltd., 12. Losers of 1 to 5 or so were Bell Aircraft, E. W. Bliss, Niles-Bement-Pond and Babcock & Wilcox. The turnover there was around 480,000 shares against 366,000 Friday.

Theaters Today

Dancers Will Appear On Strand Stage

Harry Clark's new 1940 stage offering "The Oomph Parade", will be the flesh part of the performance at the Strand theater for two days starting tomorrow.

The production is said to have plenty of top-notch dancing interspersed throughout its routine, perhaps the outstanding being the work of the Four Masterdons, an adagio foursome composed of three stalwart young men and a fairylike wisp of a girl who allows herself to be tossed around by her partners with the same ease they would toss a hand ball around. Every move, every toss, every catch has to be timed to the second for the slightest miss might cause the young lady to receive injury.

Other dancing features will be presented by Ann Gilmore, Leah Hasemeyer, the Perry Twins and the fifteen "Oomph models", whose eye appeal and real "Ooomph" is said to be only equalled by their charming performance.

The screen show will be "Opened By Mistake", a mystery story starring Charlie Ruggles, Janice Logan, Robert Paige and William Frawley.

The Strand's double-feature program, Zane Grey's "Light of Western Stars" and the Jones Family in "On Their Own", shows for the last times today.

Western Picture Is Booked at Maryland

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Twenty-Mule Team", starring Wallace Beery, will open Thursday at the Maryland theater. Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Rambeau, Alan Baxter and Noah Beery, Jr., will be seen in supporting roles.

Edward Small's "My Son, My Son", starring Madeleine Carroll, Brian Aherne and Louis Hayward, will continue at the Maryland today and tomorrow. In the supporting roles are Laraine Day, Henry Hull and Josephine Hutchinson.

Cartoon Feature Is Offered at Garden

Although most film fans think of the new "Gulliver's Travels" as the second full-length feature cartoon in the history of pitcures, Max Fleischer, its creator, made two others in the early days of his career. They were cartoon explanations of Professor Einstein's Theory or Relativity and Darwin's Theory of Evolution!

"Gulliver's Travels," the Technicolor film now at the Garden theater, the fourth cartoon feature to reach the screen. It was the first since Walt Disney's "Snow White" of two seasons ago.

"Gulliver's Travels" is based on the celebrated satire written by Dean Swift and takes the shipwrecked seafarer to the land of the thumb-high people of Lilliput.

Ona Munson, blonde dancing favorite of Broadway musical plays, has the leading feminine role with Victor McLaglen and Jackie Cooper in Universal's "The Big Guy," now at the Garden with Peggy Moran and Ed Brophy heading the supporting cast.

New Liberty Schedules Two Action Features

Romance and action in the timber country serve as background for "King of the Lumberjacks," Warner Brothers picture involving three characters caught in the stern country where you fight it out—or you don't.

In the film, which opens at the new Liberty theater tomorrow John Payne and Gloria Dickson share stellar honors with Stanley Fields in enacting this tale of rawboned drama, as vital as an ax blow.

John Payne, Gloria Dickson and Stanley Fields are in the supporting cast.

Heralded as a tribute to the gallantry of those men who brought law and order to the old west, Universal's "Riderh of Pasco Basin," starring Johnny Mack Brown, comes to the New Liberty tomorrow.

The story, declared to be historically authentic in its depiction of vigilantes in action, deals with the efforts of a band of swindlers, who try to promote a crooked irrigation project. Brown, as a young rodeo cowboy, takes up the fight when his friend, the publisher of the community's newspaper, is silenced by the gang's bullets.

Bob Baker, popular singing cowboy, enacts a top supporting role along with Fuzzy Knight, ace western comic. The romantic lead opposite Brown is played by Frances Robinson who appeared with the western star in "Desperate Trails."

Rudy Sooter's Californians, well-known recording orchestra, provides musical background for Baker's songs.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Does He Really Love Her?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The young man I've been going with for the past year has told me that he loves me, but he never mentions marriage. At the present he is not employed, but he could, at least say something about the future, when things would be better for him. He has often said that he would never marry until he is able to take care of a wife. But I think I ought to be considered in the matter.

I have a very good position and would be able to keep on after we marry. If he would only say a word about marriage in the future, I should be content, and would feel like saving for the future. Other men don't seem to interest me at all. And wondering as I do, makes me feel miserable.

M.

The modern young woman does not accept her fate in this patient manner, and the days when love affairs drifted for years are happily past. I see no harm in intimating to this young man that some suggestion as to the future would be only fair to you both.

Jealousy Often a Cure

Dear Miss Fairfax:

In my second year at college, I'm very much in love with a girl with whom I have been going for nearly a year. I always thought she favored me, but lately she has been out several times with another boy at school. Although she lets me come to see her and take her out, I know as well as everyone else that she cares for this other boy more than she does for me.

Do you advise me dropping her, or shall I try to win her back?

M.A.C.

If you wouldn't worry so much about getting her back, you would be more likely to succeed in doing so. It's a sorry thing to say, but few young people value that of which they're certain. Pursuit exercises a sort of magic which, in later years, the normal men and women are glad to exchange for some sense of permanence and security.

Go about and make new friends, and if she sees how popular you are with other girls, this girl friend is more likely to want to have you back.

Old Wound Opened by Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

What would you do if you had a husband like mine? He's always reminding me that I made an unfortunate mistake before I met him. I was square enough with him to tell him about it, when he asked me to marry him, but his reply was that he loved me and didn't care. All I can say is "Well, dear, you know I told you about it, and you said you didn't care."

I'm 26, have been married six years, and have a daughter of four. I've always been a loving and faithful wife, and try to make him happy. The house is well kept and meals are on time.

He is a good husband in every other respect, but his sly remarks about this one false step hurt me worse than if he struck me, or was a heavy drinker. If he keeps this up, I shall surely hate him.

I was only a youngster of 16 when this unfortunate thing happened. I don't think I deserve such treatment from him. Do you?

JILL.

It was very square and honorable of you to tell your husband of this one lapse in your earlier life, and I don't believe he realizes how ungenerous is this constant reminder of something he should forget, as he forgave it when you told him.

To the Philippines

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I thought ours was a complete romance. We met, fell desperately in love, and planned to be married. But now he has been transferred to a new post in the Philippines and will have to stay two years. It isn't possible for me to follow him, so we cannot be married until he comes back, and it seems so long.

He is four years older than I am, and I am 20 years old. Do you think that's about the right difference? Would you advise me to wait for him?

M. R.

The fact that you raise the question of waiting for him makes me doubt if you really love this young man. If you cared enough I don't believe you'd have any misgivings, especially with this period of separation confronting you.

Why don't you just remain good friends and see how you feel when he comes home? Meantime, don't you think it would be wiser for both of you to be free?

Special Agent Retires

Bluefield, W. Va., May 13 (AP)—After thirty-two years of chasing railroad trespassing and petty thieves, A. R. Pittman figures he has earned a rest.

So he has retired to his old home town of Springfield, Ga.

Grandmother Is Going to College

Huntington, W. Va., May 13 (AP)—Mrs. E. F. Kincaid, a three-time grandmother who reared three sons and founded a home missionary society, who works in a pre-natal clinic and keeps house besides, found she had time on her hands, so she is going to college.

Mrs. Kincaid is a freshman in the college of arts and science at Marshall college. Her youngest son, Bill, is a sophomore.

She is not preparing herself for a career, she hastens to explain. "It is just that there are so many things I don't know and college is the best place for me to find out."

"I went to high school with my middle son, T. J., and was graduated with him in June, 1931. Bill was only ten then, and I thought that was as far as I could go. But the thing I couldn't forget was that there was so much more I could learn if I went to college."

"The most difficult thing new," Mrs. Kincaid confided, "is not the subjects or method of study, but the fact I've been resting mentally for nine years. I have had to learn to concentrate all over again."

Reds-Cards Battle 14 Innings To 8-8 Tie

Start Late When Umpires Fail To Make Appearance

Johnny Mize Clouts Three Homers To Keep Cards in Game

Reds Tie Up Score in 13th after His Third Circuit Clout

Cincinnati, May 13. (AP)—Starting late because no umpires had been assigned to the game, the Reds and the Cards battled to a 14 inning 8 to 8 tie today before darkness cut short a St. Louis hitting attack featuring three home runs by Johnny Mize and one by Joe Orengo.

Four Cardinal hurlers and five of Skipper Bill McKechnie's mound corps took part in the 27-hit marathon which, delayed for 29 minutes until Umpire Larry Goetz could be called from a day off at home, continued 3 hours and 35 minutes.

Technically, it was a case of the Reds beating the visitors but being unable to do much about the big first-sacker.

Mize clouted his first homer in the second and a two-run blow in the third off Johnny Vander Meer, on the mound for the first time this year. He hit his third—and ninth of the season—in the thirteenth to give his mates a momentary advantage.

The Reds however, came right back in their half, with a pinch-hit double and a single, to tie the game in its final knot.

Young Johnny Hutchings relieved Vandy in the fourth after the double no-hit star fed another circuit smash to Orengo and a single to his opposing moundsman, starter Mort Cooper. Meantime, the Reds scored twice on third-inning singles by Eddie Joost and Vander Meer and the first of Bill Werber's four doubles, and in the fourth, singles by Frank McCormick, Ernie Lombardi and a two bagger by Harry Craft netted two more.

The Reds drove Cooper from the mound in the fifth with Werber's second double, a sacrifice, an outfield fly, a hit batsman and Frank McCormick's two-run single and made it 7 to 5 as Ernie Lombardi doubled for his third straight hit, to score his first sacker.

Not to be outdone, the Cards routed relief hurler Elmer Riddle in the sixth with a three-hit attack god for two runs, and the game stayed right there behind Milt Shoffner's and Shoun's excellent mound work until darkness won.

Werber's four doubles tied a modern major league record held by himself, Lombardi and 15 others.

Payton and Dressman Pace LaVale Keglers

Boyd Payton, Lester Shanholtz, Jim Dressman, Walt Gillum and Agnes Dressman carried away scoring honors for the LaVale Mixed League season, according to averages recently released.

Payton, who rolled on the Canary team which finished second in the last half, wound up the season with a 129 mark for 66 games. Les Shanholtz of the Flickers was just one maple behind with a 128 average for 81 tussles and Dressman and Gillum of the Robins and Flickers, respectively, were tied for third with 127 for 84 contests. Dressman was given a slight edge because he toppled four more sticks than Gillum. This pair, along with Shanholtz, were the only keglers to gather sticks in the five figures.

"Slim" Maxson of the Eagles had the loop's highest average—130—but he didn't participate in enough encounters to qualify for the league's scoring honors.

In the ladies' division, Agnes Dressman accounted for 9,734 pins in 83 games for a 117 average. Elizabeth Dressman of the Catbirds was next with an even 100 for 84 tilts. Clara Ruppert averaged 110 for 21 contests and Dot Sonners had a 107 mark for 31 games. Individual averages follow:

Bourbon All-Stars Trim Scotch Outfit

Led by Skipper Joe Wood, the All-Star Bourbons of the Temperance League scored a 210-pin victory over the All-Star Scorches of the same circuit, captained by Frank Blasi, in a recent special match on the SS. Peter & Paul pin paths.

The Bourbons lost the opening encounter by 120 uprights but rallied to cop the following jousts by comfortable margins. The scores of the last two games were 1,946-1,783 and 1,826-1,659.

Captain Wood turned in a 448 set to pace all pin dumpers, and batted down 183 sticks in the first tilt for high game. Frank Coyle topped the Scotcher with a 162-412 count. The summaries:

Allegany, Ft. Hill Both Lose Games Away from Home

Former Blanked at Paw Paw; Hyndman Tops Sentinels

The baseball forces of Allegany and Fort Hill high schools of Cumberland were nursing defeats today each having been bumped off in out of town games yesterday.

Allegany ran into a coat of whitewash at Paw Paw where Coach Arnett Swisher's Pirates polished off Coach "Bill" Bowers' boys 4 to 0. Fort Hill fared better at Hyndman but found four runs insufficient and bowed 5 to 4 in a well-played and hard fought game.

Paw Paw did all its scoring in the fourth when Leach walked, and Clark was safe on an attempted sacrifice that See fumbled. Hare walked and the bases were loaded. Spring forced Leach at the plate but Robertson singled to center, scoring Clark and Hare. Robey singled Spring home but Robertson was thrown out at the plate. Robey stole third and counted when Geatz missed the throw to third.

Allegany filled the bases in the first on two walks and Clark's error but Gaffney and Cochran flied out and Geatz was nailed at second.

Again in the fifth Allegany got three on with one away when Miller and Bell singled in succession and Geatz was safe on Clark's fumble. Hartsock fanned and See grounded out to second.

With the exception of these two threats Robey had the Allegany attack well in hand, causing the batters to pop out or be retired on easy infieldd rollers. He fanned seven to make his 12 game total 122. Box scores.

Powell Rejoins Yanks

New York, May 13 (AP) — Jake Powell, New York Yankee outfielder injured in a pre-season exhibition game, returned to New York today from St. Petersburg, Fla., where he has been convalescing.

When he returns to the Yankee lineup depends on an examination by Dr. Robert Emmett Walsh, club physician. Powell said he was feeling fine and ready to go.

Frankie Frisch of Pirates Fails To Make Deals Click

But Graying Pilot Says Present Buc Crew Is Hustling

Pittsburgh, May 14 (AP)—Nothing works for Frankie Frisch and his last-place Pirates.

Fordham Frankie has tried almost everything except hiring a magician to find a winning combination. Of 18 games the Pirates have won five.

Most of the trades have flopped, or nearly so — the crowning blow coming in failure of the "invisible $150,000 battery" — Pitcher John Gee and Catcher Ray Mueller. Cash paid for these two, plus the half dozen players thrown in with the deals, reputedly adds up to that figure. Both are back in the minors now on option.

No Pirate team has worked any harder in Spring training than this 1940 entry in the National League race. Since the season started, Frisch has gone the limit in experimenting. In one game he used 24 men — a league record.

The recruits, except Gee—whose bad arm kept him out — have been given their chance. Of the lot, Frank Gustine, second baseman, looks best to measure up to a regular job. In 11 games he has batted .372.

The graying Frisch admits it seems useless to lose sleep over his current aggregation.

"No purpose can be served in criticism of these players," he said today. "I am convinced some of them cannot deliver but nobody can say they are not hustling."

So, evidently, Frankie is figuring on more changes to make a success out of the job he took from Pie Traynor.

Nobody could blame him as he took on a philosophical mood which could be freely translated as saying aloud:

"Hey Pie — how did you ever get that club into the first division?"

Miller, King Take Kelly Tournament

Schell Miller and Harold King, with a total of 957 including a handicap of 27, won the Kelly Springfield Bowling League doubles tournament last week at Club Recreation.

Even without their handicap, Miller and King piled up enough pins to win. Miller had two games of 179 and a total of 529 for the best set of the tourney and King had 163-401.

Robert Boden and John Gogerty, with a minus three handicap, were second with 890. Boden had 235-492 and Gogerty 170-401. Boden had the best single game of the tournament.

Ben Rotruck and Homer Stoody with 874 were third, Watson Trail and Boyd Sulser with 858 placed fourth and Carl Slemmer and Stanley Zorich captured fifth with 853. Seven teams competed. The summaries:

Motorcycle Races At Windber Sunday

Windber, Pa., May 13.—With at least 20 riders from the four-state area expected to participate, the Windber Motorcycle Club will hold its first race program of the season next Sunday on the Statler farm near Rummel. The local club has a 100 percent membership in the American Motorcycle Association which has sanctioned the May 19 races. Last year the Windber group staged the Pennsylvania-Maryland championships and expect to get national approval to hold the race again this season.

The track on the Statler farm has been enlarged from one-quarter of a mile to six-tenths of a mile and is regarded as one of the best T. T. ovals in eastern United States. Time trials will begin at 1 o'clock, with the races to start one hour later.

Local Duxmen Top Old Export Outfit

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 13—The Old Export Lefthanders of this city, rolling a return duckpin match here with the strong Railway Express team of Cumberland, Md., on the Palace Bowling Alleys, suffered defeat by a margin of 116 pins. The Railway Express team, one of Cumberland's best, lost the championship of the Cumberland Commercial League, in the playoff series.

The Express team, guests of Charles V. "Buddy" Sullivan, the Old Export distributor of Martinsburg, and the Old Export Lefthanders, enjoyed a dinner, prepared by the Palace personnel, prior to the match games.

During the evening, the many patrons of the Palace were guests of "Buddy" Sullivan, enjoying Old Export beer.

After the games, both teams were served a buffet lunch, with "Buddy" acting as host. The captain of the Cumberland team, Mr. Robinson, serving in the capacity as spokesman for the team, gave a toast, expressing the team's appreciation of the Lefthanders, as well as praising the reception tendered them by Sullivan.

The Railway Express team returned home wtih a very kindly feeling towards Martinsburg, having gained many friends there, as did the Old Export Lefthanders on their recent trip to Cumberland.

Reds-Cards Battle 14 Innings To 8-8 Tie

Start Late When Umpires Fail To Make Appearance

Reds Tie Up Score in 13th after His Third Circuit Clout

Cincinnati, May 13. (AP)—Starting late because no umpires had been assigned to the game, the Reds and the Cards battled to a 14 inning 8 to 8 tie today before darkness cut short a St. Louis hitting attack featuring three home runs by Johnny Mize and one by Joe Orengo.

Four Cardinal hurlers and five of Skipper Bill McKechnie's mound corps took part in the 27-hit marathon which, delayed for 29 minutes until Umpire Larry Goetz could be called from a day off at home, continued 3 hours and 35 minutes.

Technically, it was a case of the Reds beating the visitors but being unable to do much about the big first-sacker.

Mize clouted his first homer in the second and a two-run blow in the third off Johnny Vander Meer, on the mound for the first time this year. He hit his third—and ninth of the season—in the thirteenth to give his mates a momentary advantage.

The Reds however, came right back in their half, with a pinch-hit double and a single, to tie the game in its final knot.

Young Johnny Hutchings relieved Vandy in the fourth after the double no-hit star fed another circuit smash to Orengo and a single to his opposing moundsman, starter Mort Cooper. Meantime, the Reds scored twice on third-inning singles by Eddie Joost and Vander Meer and the first of Bill Werber's four doubles, and in the fourth, singles by Frank McCormick, Ernie Lombardi and a two bagger by Harry Craft netted two more.

The Reds drove Cooper from the mound in the fifth with Werber's second double, a sacrifice, an outfield fly, a hit batsman and Frank McCormick's two-run single and made it 7 to 5 as Ernie Lombardi doubled for his third straight hit, to score his first sacker.

Not to be outdone, the Cards routed relief hurler Elmer Riddle in the sixth with a three-hit attack god for two runs, and the game stayed right there behind Milt Shoffner's and Shoun's excellent mound work until darkness won.

Werber's four doubles tied a modern major league record held by himself, Lombardi and 15 others.

Payton and Dressman Pace LaVale Keglers

Boyd Payton, Lester Shanholtz, Jim Dressman, Walt Gillum and Agnes Dressman carried away scoring honors for the LaVale Mixed League season, according to averages recently released.

Payton, who rolled on the Canary team which finished second in the last half, wound up the season with a 129 mark for 66 games. Les Shanholtz of the Flickers was just one maple behind with a 128 average for 81 tussles and Dressman and Gillum of the Robins and Flickers, respectively, were tied for third with 127 for 84 contests. Dressman was given a slight edge because he toppled four more sticks than Gillum. This pair, along with Shanholtz, were the only keglers to gather sticks in the five figures.

"Slim" Maxson of the Eagles had the loop's highest average—130—but he didn't participate in enough encounters to qualify for the league's scoring honors.

In the ladies' division, Agnes Dressman accounted for 9,734 pins in 83 games for a 117 average. Elizabeth Dressman of the Catbirds was next with an even 100 for 84 tilts. Clara Ruppert averaged 110 for 21 contests and Dot Sonners had a 107 mark for 31 games. Individual averages follow:

Led by Skipper Joe Wood, the All-Star Bourbons of the Temperance League scored a 210-pin victory over the All-Star Scorches of the same circuit, captained by Frank Blasi, in a recent special match on the SS. Peter & Paul pin paths.

The Bourbons lost the opening encounter by 120 uprights but rallied to cop the following jousts by comfortable margins. The scores of the last two games were 1,946-1,783 and 1,826-1,659.

Captain Wood turned in a 448 set to pace all pin dumpers, and batted down 183 sticks in the first tilt for high game. Frank Coyle topped the Scotcher with a 162-412 count. The summaries:

Allegany, Ft. Hill Both Lose Games Away from Home

Former Blanked at Paw Paw; Hyndman Tops Sentinels

The baseball forces of Allegany and Fort Hill high schools of Cumberland were nursing defeats today each having been bumped off in out of town games yesterday.

Allegany ran into a coat of whitewash at Paw Paw where Coach Arnett Swisher's Pirates polished off Coach "Bill" Bowers' boys 4 to 0. Fort Hill fared better at Hyndman but found four runs insufficient and bowed 5 to 4 in a well-played and hard fought game.

Paw Paw did all its scoring in the fourth when Leach walked, and Clark was safe on an attempted sacrifice that See fumbled. Hare walked and the bases were loaded. Spring forced Leach at the plate but Robertson singled to center, scoring Clark and Hare. Robey singled Spring home but Robertson was thrown out at the plate. Robey stole third and counted when Geatz missed the throw to third.

Allegany filled the bases in the first on two walks and Clark's error but Gaffney and Cochran flied out and Geatz was nailed at second.

Again in the fifth Allegany got three on with one away when Miller and Bell singled in succession and Geatz was safe on Clark's fumble. Hartsock fanned and See grounded out to second.

With the exception of these two threats Robey had the Allegany attack well in hand, causing the batters to pop out or be retired on easy infield rollers. He fanned seven to make his 12 game total 122. Box scores:

Powell Rejoins Yanks

New York, May 13 (AP) — Jake Powell, New York Yankee outfielder injured in a pre-season exhibition game, returned to New York today from St. Petersburg, Fla., where he has been convalescing.

When he returns to the Yankee lineup depends on an examination by Dr. Robert Emmett Walsh, club physician. Powell said he was feeling fine and ready to go.

Frankie Frisch of Pirates Fails To Make Deals Click

But Graying Pilot Says Present Buc Crew Is Hustling

Pittsburgh, May 14 (AP)—Nothing works for Frankie Frisch and his last-place Pirates.

Fordham Frankie has tried almost everything except hiring a magician to find a winning combination. Of 18 games the Pirates have won five.

Most of the trades have flopped, or nearly so — the crowning blow coming in failure of the "invisible $150,000 battery" — Pitcher John Gee and Catcher Ray Mueller. Cash paid for these two, plus the half dozen players thrown in with the deals, reputedly adds up to that figure. Both are back in the minors now on option.

No Pirate team has worked any harder in Spring training than this 1940 entry in the National League race. Since the season started, Frisch has gone the limit in experimenting. In one game he used 24 men — a league record.

The recruits, except Gee—whose bad arm kept him out — have been given their chance. Of the lot, Frank Gustine, second baseman, looks best to measure up to a regular job. In 11 games he has batted .372.

The graying Frisch admits it seems useless to lose sleep over his current aggregation.

"No purpose can be served in criticism of these players," he said today. "I am convinced some of them cannot deliver but nobody can say they are not hustling."

So, evidently, Frankie is figuring on more changes to make a success out of the job he took from Pie Traynor.

Nobody could blame him as he took on a philosophical mood which could be freely translated as saying aloud:

"Hey Pie — how did you ever get that club into the first division?"

Miller, King Take Kelly Tournament

Schell Miller and Harold King, with a total of 957 including a handicap of 27, won the Kelly Springfield Bowling League doubles tournament last week at Club Recreation.

Even without their handicap, Miller and King piled up enough pins to win. Miller had two games of 179 and a total of 529 for the best set of the tourney and King had 163-401.

Robert Boden and John Gogerty, with a minus three handicap, were second with 890. Boden had 235-492 and Gogerty 170-401. Boden had the best single game of the tournament.

Ben Rotruck and Homer Stoody with 874 were third, Watson Trail and Boyd Sulser with 858 placed fourth and Carl Slemmer and Stanley Zorich captured fifth with 853. Seven teams competed. The summaries:

Motorcycle Races At Windber Sunday

Windber, Pa., May 13.—With at least 20 riders from the four-state area expected to participate, the Windber Motorcycle Club will hold its first race program of the season next Sunday on the Statler farm near Rummel. The local club has a 100 percent membership in the American Motorcycle Association which has sanctioned the May 19 races. Last year the Windber group staged the Pennsylvania-Maryland championships and expect to get national approval to hold the race again this season.

The track on the Statler farm has been enlarged from one-quarter of a mile to six-tenths of a mile and is regarded as one of the best T. T. ovals in eastern United States. Time trials will begin at 1 o'clock, with the races to start one hour later.

Local Duxmen Top Old Export Outfit

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 13—The Old Export Lefthanders of this city, rolling a return duckpin match here with the strong Railway Express team of Cumberland, Md., on the Palace Bowling Alleys, suffered defeat by a margin of 116 pins. The Railway Express team, one of Cumberland's best, lost the championship of the Cumberland Commercial League, in the playoff series.

The Express team, guests of Charles V. "Buddy" Sullivan, the Old Export distributor of Martinsburg, and the Old Export Lefthanders, enjoyed a dinner, prepared by the Palace personnel, prior to the match games.

During the evening, the many patrons of the Palace were guests of "Buddy" Sullivan, enjoying Old Export beer.

After the games, both teams were served a buffet lunch, with "Buddy" acting as host. The captain of the Cumberland team, Mr. Robinson, serving in the capacity as spokesman for the team, gave a toast, expressing the team's appreciation of the Lefthanders, as well as praising the reception tendered them by Sullivan.

The Railway Express team returned home with a very kindly feeling towards Martinsburg, having gained many friends there, as did the Old Export Lefthanders on their recent trip to Cumberland.

Jenkins Makes Critics Regard Him Seriously

By JOHN LARDNER

New York, May 13. (N.A.N.A.)—The question now arises whether Lew Jenkins can beat Henry Armstrong. It's a nice problem in boxing technology.

Shortly after he bombed and razed Lou Ambers for the lightweight championship the other night, Mr. Jenkins pulled on his boots, which are almost knee-high, and called around at the cashier's office to collect a check for a trifle less than $10,000. He stared at this document with wide and famished eyes. He'd heard that there was $10,000 in the world, but he was a little skeptical. A year ago his earthly possessions consisted of change for a sawbuck, a $10 bill.

While gazing at the check (which was certified and engraved, a splendid specimen of Mike Jacob's mature creative period, showing a power and human insight which were absent from the author's earlier work), Mr. Jenkins heard a question addressed to him.

"How do you feel about Henry Armstrong? Can you beat him?"

"Why not?" said the hungry killer, and departed for Sweetwater, Tex., where he was met by a brass band and offered the key to the city. Sweetwater is the principal fortress of Nolan County, in North central Texas. Its exports now include Jenkins and Slinging Sam Baugh, a good output for a town of 11,000 pop. (1930 census).

Meets Armstrong in July

The scourge of Sweetwater will meet H. Armstrong in July, with the usual number of holds barred. Ostensibly, this engagement will be for the welterweight title, but deep down in their hearts, all parties concerned — Armstrong, Jenkins, Hymie Caplin, fat Eddie Mead, and M. Strauss Jacobs—know it will be for the loot involved. Two hundred thousand dollars is what they guess it will draw outdoors.

Armstrong is the early favorite, and I think he deserves to be. Not that Jenkins won't have a chance—he will, and a good one. But when you gauge well in advance a fight between two men of widely separate styles, whose paths have never crossed before, it pays to be conservative. We know everything about Armstrong, and it adds up to a high total. We don't know everything about Jenkins.

There are two algebraic quantities in Lew's case, X and Y, namely: Is he smart, and can he take it?

He is an open, aggressive fighter with two good punching hands, of the many blows he planted on Amber's chin last week, two of the best were southpaw. One of these was the first punch of the fight, and the other was the punch which floored Ambers for the first time in the second round, launching Jenkins's second campaign, the one that brought him victory. In other words, he uses the left hand for foundation work, and very effective it is.

Any man who hits fast and hard with either hand is dangerous to any other man, Joe Louis being the prime example.

One Punch Was Enough

Once Jenkins nailed Ambers on the jaw, and stunned him, the fight was his, because he faced no further risk. Ambers lacks punching strength, and his only weapon, once hit, was agility. Thus, Jenkins could afford to stalk him without fear of reprisal, and when he hit the Italian again before his head had cleared, he won his knockout.

Henry Armstrong is a different plate of chops. Henry has offensive strength of his own. He is perilous, even when hurt. Furthermore, his style is not so nicely suited to Jenkins's taste. He will come in and lean on Lew's chest and pour blows upon the Texan with fist, wrist and elbow, and there is no way Jenkins can hold him off, for Henry is full of vitamins. Thus, Jenkins will have to punch short, instead of employing the long, swinging style he likes best.

Ambers did well against Armstrong because the little negro fights close, which is one of Ambers's specialties. I don't know if Jenkins can do that. Maybe he can. It's just a case of insufficient data.

One other point: Jenkins has been knocked out, and only a year ago, by one Pete Lello. If punches can hurt him, Armstrong can hurt him, for Henry is a painful, damaging man, though by no means as good a one-blow hitter as Jenkins.

What it comes down to, then, is this: Jenkins must be able to adapt himself to changing styles, and to take a punch. And we have no reason to believe he can't. It's just a brand new fight, that's all.

You can understand the impression the scourge of Sweetwater has made upon us critics when we take him so seriously so promptly.

Vito Tamulis Wins For Brooklyn as Durocher Clouts

Former Cumberland Colt Hurler Sets Down Phils 6-3

Brooklyn, May 13 (AP)—Effective relief pitching by Lefty Vito Tamulis and a boisterous batting exhibition led by Manager Leo Durocher with four hits brought the Brooklyn Dodgers a 6 to 3 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies today in the deciding contest of their three-game series.

The Dodgers punched out 11 hits off Ike Pearson and took charge of the game in the last of the fifth with three runs on Durocher's double, a walk, Dixie Walker's single and Babe Phelps' triple. They had tallied once in the first on a double by Charley Gilbert and a single by Walker and added runs in the sixth and eighth.

Hugh Casey started on the mound for Brooklyn and held the Phils scoreless until the fifth when they bunched three runs on Pearson's double, a field's choice that misfired, a single by Art Mahan, a fly by Chuck Klein and a double by Emmett Mueller.

Tamulis then held the Phils scoreless for the last four frames and got credit for his first decision of the year.

The Candy Kitchen and Trozzo's stayed undefeated when they downed King's and Keegan's on the Penn avenue field, while Lacy's and Post's were winners over the lowly Davis and Liberty outfits.

Sam's Candy Kitchen kept their slate clean and remained a half game ahead of Trozzo's when they slamed out a 25 to 5 victory. Hite led the sluggers with two home runs, a double and single, while Chick Snider collected four singles. Hersh, Spriggs and Porter accounted for three of King's five runs when each smashed a homer.

Edgar Widdows and Sam Deluca each had three blows along with Jack Wilhelm pitching two-hit ball the Whirlwinds won their fifth straight game. "Shake" Clark of Trozzo's and Bus Miller of Keegan's each had a triple. Wilhelm struck out five batters for Trozzo's.

With Lacy's remaining only a half game back of Trozzo's they drove out 16 hits and scored 20 runs. Al Weltman pitched five-hit ball and struck out five Davis batters, besides hitting a home run and a single. Herman Athey had three hits for Lacy's while Brown had a triple, double and single for Davis.

With the Post Cardinals and Liberty Dairy sporting new uniforms, the Cardinals were the winners with a four-hit outburst in the sixth to score two runs and sew up the game. Roby pitched good ball and missed a shutout when Spoltore let Wimer's single roll through his legs for a triple. W. Dean's one-handed catch of Reynold's line drive in the fourth was the fielding feature.

THE U. S. OPEN PREVIEW

There will be an outstanding preview of the U. S. Open Championship at Cleveland this week-end. It will be in the form of the Goodall round-robin at Fresh Meadow, Long Island, where fifteen of the world's leading golf stars will battle man to man in one of the toughest of all golf tests.

The next Open at Cleveland should be one of the greatest ever held, with the class of the field marching in review, where one man must stand alone from more than a thousand starters. The winner plays against the field.

At Fresh Meadow we have the selected pick of this championship crop where again the winner must whip the other fourteen leading stars. By leading stars I mean such entries as Jimmy Demaret, the top entry for 1940; Ben Hogan, the slender, long-hitting runner-up to his fellow Texan; Byron Nelson, the defending Open title holder, another Texan; Henry Picard, the P. G. A. champion; Sammy Snead; Craig Wood, and the New Jersey Adonis who tied Nelson i nthe last Open; Dick Metz; Gene Sarazen; and the others who belong around the top.

The Top Starters

Moving into the summer stretch, on their way through the Goodall round-robin and the U. S. Open, the first entry to walk beneath the great, white spotlight is Jimmy Demaret, the man with the green hat and the quick smile, from Houston, Texas. Demaret has won seven major tournaments this winter and spring, not including two one-day tests from which he walked away with the major cash.

Demaret has two main factors to back up his challenge—a fine golf swing, plus a cool head, and a stout heart. You can also add a happy, care-free mind. He is the most relaxed star golfer I've seen since Walter Hagen's prime.

As one star pro said to me, "How can you beat a man who doesn't seem to care what happens—who never tightens up?"

Then there is 132-pound Ben Hogan, another Texan, "the might atom of golf," one of the longest hitters the game has ever known—the longest hitter in the world, pound for pound, by many yards. Hogan, who played through his last four consecutive tournaments in 32 under par, is still in front for the 1940 scoring mark, just a faint fraction over 70.

Hogan and Nelson, both Texans, take tournaments much more seriously than Demaret does. They are two rather tense, hard, grim battlers, keyed up to the final touch. Both are hard to discourage, even when off form. In the last Open Byron Nelson opened with a 72 or a 73 that for almost any other golfer might easily have been an 80 or higher. For the first two rounds he was in nothing but trouble. And then he hit his stride to be a Man o' War down the stretch.

The Parade Moves On

These are not the only ones. There is Henry Picard, the tall and willowy P. G. A. champion who is one of the best, as fine a shotmaker with wood and iron as you may care to see.

There is Craig Wood, another long driver who has stumbled into more ragged luck than anyone in the game. The popular pro at Winged Foot might have won the four championships of golf were it not for a total distribution of turf less than two inches. That's how close a few missed putts came.

There is Sammy Snead, rated by Bobby Jones as the finest all-around swinger he ever saw, who only needs control of his taut nerves to mop up the pack.

There is Martin Pose, the Argentine champion, who will undoubtedly be a threat in both the round robin and the Open.

There are Gene Sarazen, Lawson Little, Horton Smith, Paul Runyon, Jimmy Hines and others who can get hotter than a dozen packs of fire-crackers.

The winner is usually the fellow who can take the hardest nerve and mental beating, who can stick to his guns, who refuses to get discouraged over a few mishaps.

This is the sort of game golf is. It is the greatest test under fire of nerve and mental control I've ever known. It is a game that demands not only swinging skill but above all the ability to keep direct thought upon the next shot to play, no matter what it is and regardless of what may have happened before.

This Game of Golf

Golf is largely a matter of mental attitudes. I can name you any number of golfers among the pros who have an almost perfect swing, who can use wood and iron effectively in friendly or exhibition play.

But golf means something more than physical proficiency—grip and stance—the main fundamentals. It also means the ability to keep on concentrating through shot after shot—hole after hole—round after round.

Winning golf means swinging skill, but it also means "thinking of the right thing at the right time," as Long Jim Barnes expresses it. It means concentrated thought on the essentials of the swing. Even among the leading pros the tendency or the temptation to steer the ball at a vital moment is overwhelming.

In the last four months Demaret and Hogan have shown greater ability than any others in this matter of concentrated thought. It has now been more than a month since the two left off and it will be interesting to see whether or not they can resume their winning ways at Fresh Meadow in the round-robin. If they can they will be doubly dangerous at Cleveland's hurly-burly later on.

Golf is largely a game of fighting off distractions, shot by shot. The only stroke that should matter is the next one to be played, and that's been the way Demaret and Hogan have handled their work to date.

Midget Car Races Provide 'Stake'

Indianapolis, May 13 (AP)—The race drive of 10 or 20 years ago may look with disdain on the midget automobile races of today but they are providing the "meat on the table" for most of the boys who are tuning motors for this year's 500-mile Memorial Day classic at the Indianapolis speedway.

Several years ago a circuit of big time races kept drivers busy, but now only one or two events, in addition to Indianapolis, offer enough money for much more than cakes and coffee.

Most drivers race in order to eat. So they're turned to the midgets.

Harry McQuinn and Bob Swanson are among the most successful midget pilots.

Swanson, a curly-haired Los Angeles boy, who walks with a limp from race track accidents, says it's like this:

"I've been coming to Indianapolis for three or four years and it costs me about $500 even to live here. Then I collect maybe $200 from the race itself. You can see how I stand.

"I decided I'd do it differently this year so I brought my two midgets with me and I'll race them around here while I'm getting ready for the big race here."

The midget machines of today are far different from those which first were used in such races. Most of them then used outboard motor and looked like pushmobiles with motors. Now they're sleek, streamlined and speedsters which can hit 100 miles an hour or more.

Swanson will drive a 16-cylinder car in the big May 30 race.

Jenkins Makes Critics Regard Him Seriously

By JOHN LARDNER

New York, May 13. (N.A.N.A.)—The question now arises whether Lew Jenkins can beat Henry Armstrong. It's a nice problem in boxing technology.

Shortly after he bombed and razed Lou Ambers for the lightweight championship the other night, Mr. Jenkins pulled on his boots, which are almost knee-high, and called around at the cashier's office to collect a check for a trifle less than $10,000. He stared at this document with wide and famished eyes. He'd heard that there was $10,000 in the world, but he was a little skeptical. A year ago his earthly possessions consisted of change for a sawbuck, a $10 bill.

While gazing at the check (which was certified and engraved, a splendid specimen of Mike Jacob's mature creative period, showing a power and human insight which were absent from the author's earlier work), Mr. Jenkins heard a question addressed to him.

"How do you feel about Henry Armstrong? Can you beat him?"

"Why not?" said the hungry killer, and departed for Sweetwater, Tex., where he was met by a brass band and offered the key to the city. Sweetwater is the principal fortress of Nolan County, in North central Texas. Its exports now include Jenkins and Slinging Sam Baugh, a good output for a town of 11,000 pop. (1930 census).

Meets Armstrong in July

The scourge of Sweetwater will meet H. Armstrong in July, with the usual number of holds barred. Ostensibly, this engagement will be for the welterweight title, but deep down in their hearts, all parties concerned — Armstrong, Jenkins, Hymie Caplin, fat Eddie Mead, and M. Strauss Jacobs—know it will be for the loot involved. Two hundred thousand dollars is what they guess it will draw outdoors.

Armstrong is the early favorite, and I think he deserves to be. Not that Jenkins won't have a chance—he will, and a good one. But when you gauge well in advance a fight between two men of widely separate styles, whose paths have never crossed before, it pays to be conservative. We know everything about Armstrong, and it adds up to a high total. We don't know everything about Jenkins.

There are two algebraic quantities in Lew's case, X and Y, namely: Is he smart, and can he take it?

He is an open, aggressive fighter with two good punching hands, of the many blows he planted on Amber's chin last week, two of the best were southpaw. One of these was the first punch of the fight, and the other was the punch which floored Ambers for the first time in the second round, launching Jenkins's second campaign, the one that brought him victory. In other words, he uses the left hand for foundation work, and very effective it is.

Any man who hits fast and hard with either hand is dangerous to any other man, Joe Louis being the prime example.

One Punch Was Enough

Once Jenkins nailed Ambers on the jaw, and stunned him, the fight was his, because he faced no further risk. Ambers lacks punching strength, and his only weapon, once hit, was agility. Thus, Jenkins could afford to stalk him without fear of reprisal, and when he hit the Italian again before his head had cleared, he won his knockout.

Henry Armstrong is a different plate of chops. Henry has offensive strength of his own. He is perilous, even when hurt. Furthermore, his style is not so nicely suited to Jenkins's taste. He will come in and lean on Lew's chest and pour blows upon the Texan with fist, wrist and elbow, and there is no way Jenkins can hold him off, for Henry is full of vitamins. Thus, Jenkins will have to punch short, instead of employing the long, swinging style he likes best.

Ambers did well against Armstrong because the little negro fights close, which is one of Ambers's specialties. I don't know if Jenkins can do that. Maybe he can. It's just a case of insufficient data.

One other point: Jenkins has been knocked out, and only a year ago, by one Pete Lello. If punches can hurt him, Armstrong can hurt him, for Henry is a painful, damaging man, though by no means as good a one-blow hitter as Jenkins.

What it comes down to, then, is this: Jenkins must be able to adapt himself to changing styles, and to take a punch. And we have no reason to believe he can't. It's just a brand new fight, that's all.

You can understand the impression the scourge of Sweetwater has made upon us critics when we take him so seriously so promptly.

Vito Tamulis Wins For Brooklyn as Durocher Clouts

Former Cumberland Colt Hurler Sets Down Phils 6-3

Brooklyn, May 13 (AP)—Effective relief pitching by Lefty Vito Tamulis and a boisterous batting exhibition led by Manager Leo Durocher with four hits brought the Brooklyn Dodgers a 6 to 3 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies today in the deciding contest of their three-game series.

The Dodgers punched out 11 hits off Ike Pearson and took charge of the game in the last of the fifth with three runs on Durocher's double, a walk, Dixie Walker's single and Babe Phelps' triple. They had tallied once in the first on a double by Charley Gilbert and a single by Walker and added runs in the sixth and eighth.

Hugh Casey started on the mound for Brooklyn and held the Phils scoreless until the fifth when they bunched three runs on Pearson's double, a field's choice that misfired, a single by Art Mahan, a fly by Chuck Klein and a double by Emmett Mueller.

Tamulis then held the Phils scoreless for the last four frames and got credit for his first decision of the year.

The Candy Kitchen and Trozzo's stayed undefeated when they downed King's and Keegan's on the Penn avenue field, while Lacy's and Post's were winners over the lowly Davis and Liberty outfits.

Sam's Candy Kitchen kept their slate clean and remained a half game ahead of Trozzo's when they slamed out a 25 to 5 victory. Hite led the sluggers with two home runs, a double and single, while Chick Snider collected four singles. Hersh, Spriggs and Porter accounted for three of King's five runs when each smashed a homer.

Edgar Widdows and Sam Deluca each had three blows along with Jack Wilhelm pitching two-hit ball the Whirlwinds won their fifth straight game. "Shake" Clark of Trozzo's and Bus Miller of Keegan's each had a triple. Wilhelm struck out five batters for Trozzo's.

With Lacy's remaining only a half game back of Trozzo's they drove out 16 hits and scored 20 runs. Al Weltman pitched five-hit ball and struck out five Davis batters, besides hitting a home run and a single. Herman Athey had three hits for Lacy's while Brown had a triple, double and single for Davis.

With the Post Cardinals and Liberty Dairy sporting new uniforms, the Cardinals were the winners with a four-hit outburst in the sixth to score two runs and sew up the game. Roby pitched good ball and missed a shutout when Spoltore let Wimer's single roll through his legs for a triple. W. Dean's one-handed catch of Reynold's line drive in the fourth was the fielding feature.

THE U. S. OPEN PREVIEW

There will be an outstanding preview of the U. S. Open Championship at Cleveland this week-end. It will be in the form of the Goodall round-robin at Fresh Meadow, Long Island, where fifteen of the world's leading golf stars will battle man to man in one of the toughest of all golf tests.

The next Open at Cleveland should be one of the greatest ever held, with the class of the field marching in review, where one man must stand alone from more than a thousand starters. The winner plays against the field.

At Fresh Meadow we have the selected pick of this championship crop where again the winner must whip the other fourteen leading stars. By leading stars I mean such entries as Jimmy Demaret, the top entry for 1940; Ben Hogan, the slender, long-hitting runner-up to his fellow Texan; Byrrn Nelson, the defending Open title holder, another Texan; Henry Picard, the P. G. A. champion; Sammy Snead; Craig Wood, and the New Jersey Adonis who tied Nelson i nthe last Open; Dick Metz; Gene Sarazen; and the others who belong around the top.

The Top Starters

Moving into the summer stretch, on their way through the Goodall round-robin and the U. S. Open, the first entry to walk beneath the great, white spotlight is Jimmy Demaret, the man with the green hat and the quick smile, from Houston, Texas. Demaret has won seven major tournaments this winter and spring, not including two one-day tests from which he walked away with the major cash.

Demaret has two main factors to back up his challenge—a fine golf swing, plus a cool head, and a stout heart. You can also add a happy, care-free mind. He is the most relaxed star golfer I've seen since Walter Hagen's prime.

As one star pro said to me, "How can you beat a man who doesn't seem to care what happens—who never tightens up?"

Then there is 132-pound Ben Hogan, another Texan, "the might atom of golf," one of the longest hitters the game has ever known—the longest hitter in the world, pound for pound, by many yards. Hogan, who played through his last four consecutive tournaments in 32 under par, is still in front for the 1940 scoring mark, just a faint fraction over 70.

Hogan and Nelson, both Texans, take tournaments much more seriously than Demaret does. They are two rather tense, hard, grim battlers, keyed up to the final touch. Both are hard to discourage, even when off form. In the last Open Byron Nelson opened with a 72 or a 73 that for almost any other golfer might easily have been an 80 or higher. For the first two rounds he was in nothing but trouble. And then he hit his stride to be a Man o' War down the stretch.

The Parade Moves On

These are not the only ones. There is Henry Picard, the tall and willowy P. G. A. champion who is one of the best, as fine a shotmaker with wood and iron as you may care to see.

There is Craig Wood, another long driver who has stumbled into more ragged luck than anyone in the game. The popular pro at Winged Foot might have won the four championships of golf were it not for a total distribution of turf less than two inches. That's how close a few missed putts came.

There is Sammy Snead, rated by Bobby Jones as the finest all-around swinger he ever saw, who only needs control of his taut nerves to mop up the pack.

There is Martin Pose, the Argentine champion, who will undoubtedly be a threat in both the round robin and the Open.

There are Gene Sarazen, Lawson Little, Horton Smith, Paul Runyon, Jimmy Hines and others who can get hotter than a dozen packs of fire-crackers.

The winner is usually the fellow who can take the hardest nerve and mental beating, who can stick to his guns, who refuses to get discouraged over a few mishaps.

This is the sort of game golf is. It is the greatest test under fire of nerve and mental control I've ever known. It is a game that demands not only swinging skill but above all the ability to keep direct thought upon the next shot to play, no matter what it is and regardless of what may have happened before.

This Game of Golf

Golf is largely a matter of mental attitudes. I can name you any number of golfers among the pros who have an almost perfect swing, who can use wood and iron effectively in friendly or exhibition play.

But golf means something more than physical proficiency—grip and stance—the main fundamentals. It also means the ability to keep on concentrating through shot after shot—hole after hole—round after round.

Winning golf means swinging skill, but it also means "thinking of the right thing at the right time," as Long Jim Barnes expresses it. It means concentrated thought on the essentials of the swing. Even among the leading pros the tendency or the temptation to steer the ball at a vital moment is overwhelming.

In the last four months Demaret and Hogan have shown greater ability than any others in this matter of concentrated thought. It has now been more than a month since the two left off and it will be interesting to see whether or not they can resume their winning ways at Fresh Meadow in the round-robin. If they can they will be doubly dangerous at Cleveland's hurly-burly later on.

Golf is largely a game of fighting off distractions, shot by shot. The only stroke that should matter is the next one to be played, and that's been the way Demaret and Hogan have handled their work to date.

Midget Car Races Provide 'Stake'

Indianapolis, May 13 (AP)—The race drive of 10 or 20 years ago may look with disdain on the midget automobile races of today but they are providing the "meat on the table" for most of the boys who are tuning motors for this year's 500-mile Memorial Day classic at the Indianapolis speedway.

Several years ago a circuit of big time races kept drivers busy, but now only one or two events, in addition to Indianapolis, offer enough money for much more than cakes and coffee.

Most drivers race in order to eat. So they're turned to the midgets.

Harry McQuinn and Bob Swanson are among the most successful midget pilots.

Swanson, a curly-haired Los Angeles boy, who walks with a limp from race track accidents, says it's like this:

"I've been coming to Indianapolis for three or four years and it costs me about $500 even to live here. Then I collect maybe $200 from the race itself. You can see how I stand.

"I decided I'd do it differently this year so I brought my two midgets with me and I'll race them around here while I'm getting ready for the big race here."

The midget machines of today are far different from those which first were used in such races. Most of them then used outboard motor and looked like pushmobiles with motors. Now they're sleek, streamlined and speedsters which can hit 100 miles an hour or more.

Swanson will drive a 16-cylinder car in the big May 30 race.

MAN SHOT TO DEATH IN PAR

Slayer Confesses, Declares Victim 'Stole My Wife'

Woman Sees Killing, Rides to Hospital With Dying Friend

Smouldering jealousy last night led a husband to shoot and kill a man he said had stolen his wife.

The shooting took place in Riverside park shortly after 9 p. m., while the wife looked on.

The dead man was Kermit Bailey, 24, of Ridgeley, a dishwasher at Porter's restaurant.

His confessed slayer was John H. Clifford, 32, of the Brunswick hotel, a Liberty Lunch employe.

Surrenders to Police

Desk Sergt. B. B. Browne quoted him as saying, "I just shot a man over at the park for stealing my wife."

Meanwhile, Officers John Powers and Harold Kennard, responding to a call from the West Side Pharmacy, arrived at the park to find Bailey mortally wounded, his head in Mrs. Clifford's lap.

The officers rushed the man to Allegany hospital, where he died a few minutes later without regaining consciousness. Mrs. Clifford, 21, rode to the hospital with him in the patrol wagon.

Signs Confession

After being questioned by Assistant Chief John J. Treiber and Detective R. E. Flynn and again admitting the slaying, Clifford was taken to the State's Attorney's office for further questioning.

There, according to County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle, he signed a confession. Boyle said he would be charged with murder.

Clifford told the officers that he had met his wife and Bailey at 6 p. m. at the M & A restaurant on Baltimore street to discuss what should be done with the Cliffords' three-year-old daughter, who has been living with Mrs. Clifford at the home of her mother, Mrs. Louisa Woods, 7 Blocher street, Ridgeley.

Bailey had been rooming at the same address, coming here from Baltimore the week after Easter.

Couple Separated

The prisoner said he and his wife, wed in August, had been estranged since the day after Easter, and that he wanted custody of the child.

After attempted to persuade the pair to go to his room in the hotel to thrash out the matter, Clifford said he agreed to meet them later in Riverside park.

There they met at about 8:30 p. m. The discussion continued for about a half-hour, growing more and more bitter.

They stood up. Then, Clifford said Bailey threatened to "mash my mouth in."

Victim "Reaches for Pocket"

At the same time, Bailey reached for his hip-pocket, according to Clifford.

Clifford declared he didn't know whether Bailey was merely reaching for a handkerchief or for a weapon.

Without waiting to see, he whipped out a .38 calibre revolver and fired three times. One bullet entered the left side near the heart, and emerged under the skin on the right side. It was this wound that doctors said caused death.

Bailey had another wound in the right shoulder and a bullet-hole through the right hand, near the base of the thumb.

Wife Blames Husband

Mrs. Clifford who is being held in the city jail as a material witness, told authorities however, that her husband shot without provocation.

Clifford's story about his interest in the custody of his daughter was confirmed by Assistant Chief Trieber.

The man had been to police headquarters several times in recent weeks to seek advice on regaining custody of the child, Treiber said. His last trip was about 8 o'clock last night, a scant hour before the shooting.

Chief Treiber said he told Clifford each time to consult a lawyer about court proceedings to win custody of the child and warned him he would get in trouble if he kept quarreling with his wife about it.

Disobeys Warning

Last night, after telling the assistant chief that he was supposed to try to reach an agreement with his wife on the matter, he indicated that he would not keep the appointment—that he would see a lawyer, as the chief suggested.

But he kept the appointment, and tragedy resulted.

There were conflicting versions of what ocurred after the shooting.

Detective Flynn said he had been told by by-standers that Clifford, after shooting Bailey, scuffled with his wife, then ran back, picked up the dying man and punched him in the face several times. Another version was that Clifford kicked the prostrate man.

Victim's Nose Broken

Doctors reported that Bailey's nose was broken and that he had other marks on his face.

The gun was found in the park.

All From Morgantown

Police said all the principals in the tragedy were formerly from Morgantown, W. Va. Clifford has been living here for about three years, they said.

Town Hallers Reach New Dramatic Heights

There is an allegorical witchery in Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound" that makes it a delight when properly produced or a mawkish fizzle if butchered.

The somewhat intangible, unearthly substance of the play puts it in a little field of its own along with such dramas as "Death Takes a Holiday," "Lillion" and Maxwell Anderson's "High Tor," the latter being in a somewhat thinner vein.

A spectator at the Town Hall Players' performance last night found himself wishing that the group might do "Liliom" or "High Tor," which perhaps is the best compliment he could pay the players.

Superior Performance

The players faultered once or twice last night, but in the main they gave a beautiful performance. Certainly, several members of the group tapped resources never noted by this reporter in previous performances.

Stripping the play of the allegory that drenches all three acts, one finds a blindingly brilliant job of character analysis by the author.

Vane provides a sensitive and serious group plenty of meat and potatoes in the way of character delineation and in the main the members of the cast snatched up their golden opportunity.

Low Achieves New Success

Although this reviewer must admit that Carl Low's work in the past had impressed him as the somewhat meticulous and studied perfection often acquired by small talents, the sincerity and character-probing depth of his Tom Prior bushwhacks such an estimate right off the map.

Perhaps the former estimate was the result of seeing Mr. Low in entirely too many clever little things. At any rate, the sincerity and character-probing job done by Low last night was a thing of beauty. Mr. Low's performance last night had some muscle.

Low was Tom Prior. And his Tom Prior makes one hopeful he may one day get in an dig on "Liliom" or perhaps portray that rugged individualist on the mountain in Maxwell Anderson's "High Tor."

Miss Clerihue Does Well

It also seems necessary to revise a former estimate in the case of Lois Mae Clerihue, whose performance in "Stage Door" struck this reporter as somewhat below par. Last night, playing the role of Ann, Miss Clerihue completely dominated the second scene in Act 3. It was sometimes difficult to understand each word she spoke, but she gave the part a force and realism that rang true. She capably filled the part.

Virginia Keffer "Delightful"

Virginia Keffer, while she gave the part of Mrs. Midget a delightful, somewhat subtle quality, seemed to experience difficulty with what was apparently a Cockney accent. While her stage voice has a pleasant quality it is just as important that the folks in the rear hear what is going on as the folks down front. It was difficult to understand each word Miss Keffer spoke last night.

However, it is not hard to hear either Jack Moore or Louise Moore. Both were splendid in their respective roles, Mrs. Moore as the awful Mrs. Cliveden-Banks and Mr. Moore as the equally awful Mr. Lingley, of Lingley Incorporated.

All Parts Well Filled

Willis Conover, making his second appearance with the players, filled his role capably. William Kight as the Rev. William Duke was very good, particularly after he made up his mind he was dead. He shed his profession and decided to be a regular guy for a spell.

J. Hodge Smith, as Scrubby, gave as perfect an imitation of a completely dead man as was possible. Robert Rosamond, as the Inspector, turned in another able performance in the last act.

What Show's About

Most people will admit they like a show like "Outward Bound," although one is not always quite clear what the author is talking about. For the benefit of those not familiar with the plot, it concerns a group of people who suddenly discover they are dead.

They find themselves on a most unusual boat and most of the action occurs in the ship's bar room. After clearly depicting the characters just for what they are, the boat approaches Hell. The Inspector then swings along side in a dingy and interviews the candidates for a hereafter in the saloon. From these the various passengers pass on to their just rewards.

With "Outward Bound," the players complete their season.

Summing up, with something of a footnote, the City of Cumberland is blessed with a sterling little theatre group that continually keeps giving promise of even better things to come. Why a play of the caliber presented last night isn't being given at least to three packed houses is difficult to determine.

The sincerity and effort of the group, without a doubt the finest thing of its sort in the entire area, deserves to be more richly rewarded by bigger and bigger audiences.

Doubts Germans Are Using Secret Gas

Chicago, May 13 (AP)—Dr. W. Lee Lewis, developer of the Lewisite gas which was manufactured in large quantities at the end of the World War, said today he did not believe was was the secret weapon the Germans were reported to have used in the Belgian invasion.

"More likely it is a tremendously powerful explosive," the chemist said. "Although there have been great advances in development of gas for defense, the emphasis in the present war has been on mechanism."

Dr. Lewis was inclined to doubt reports that the new weapon was a gas which put soldiers to sleep for about an hour. There have been rumors of such a gas for a long time, but it has never been proved a reality. I personally don't think Hitler would spend his time developing a gas that would let his victims recover in an hour.

Lewisite, a Vesicant like mustard gas, was developed if 1918, but never used in combat. Dr. Lewis described it as an oily substance about the consistency of olive oil, which was slightly stronger than mustard gas and which, because of its arsenic content, was systemic poison as well as a searing agent.

Chemist Attacked By Two Germans

Los Angeles, May 13 (AP) — Carl Albin, Swiss chemist who was brought here by an oil company to perfect his formula for leadless high test gasoline, told police he was attacked in his laboratory today by two German-speaking men who demanded his formula.

The chemist told Detective Lieut. R. L. Berry he smashed a light bulb, but the men overpowered him in the darkness and started to leave with his documents. In desperation, he hurled a half-gallon container of sulphuric acid and one of the men cried:

"Get me out of here. I'm blinded."

Albin said he recovered his brief case and ran after the men, one of whom fired at him several times before they escaped in a gray coupe.

His home and his laboratory both had been entered previously, the chemist said, and some correspondence stolen.

Police canvassed hospitals and contacted physicians to find whether a sulphuric acid victim had applied for treatment.

Committee Named For Playgrounds

Volunteer Work Saves City $100

Paring expenses wherever the opportunity offers still appears to be the prime objective of the mayor and city council, now busy drawing up the annual budget.

Another $100 was whacked off yesterday when the mayor and council rescinded an order of two weeks ago placing Mrs. W. Ralph Bretz in charge of playgrounds. Mrs. Bretz had been scheduled to receive $50 monthly salary during July and August.

'Volunteer' Committee Named

After rescinding their previous action, the mayor and council appointed a new committee to serve without pay. It includes Mrs. Bretz, William A. McCullough, Leroy Snyder, Claude Brant, H. Clifford Spiker, and Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper.

Previously, council had cut the salary of Mrs. Marguerite A. Findlay, city parks supervisor, from $900 to $300 a year. Not only was her monthly salary reduced from $75 to $50, but it was provided that she be paid only for the six-month period May 1 to November 1, instead of on a year round basis.

Camden Avenue Request

The mayor and council yesterday received a petition signed by tighteen people requesting that Camden avenue sidewalks, curb and gutter be laid as a WPA project. The signers promised that payments for the work would be made in sixty days.

City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer inrormed the mayor that the Camden avenue work is already under consideration in the farm of a blanket project to be announced shortly.

Want Dam Jobs

William Shephard, colored, representing a group of Cumberland citizens desirous of obtaining work on the Savage river dam, appeared before the mayor and council to see what could be done about it.

Shephard complained that some men without automobiles had been certified for WPA work on the dam while those with transportation facilities had been left out in the cold.

Mayor Irvine referred him to Henry Tarring Jr., WPA resident engineer.

Improvement costs for the Potomac river flood gates were estimated at $753 yesterday by Engineer Rizer. The engineer, street commissioner and fire chief will make a recommendation as to how the work will be done.

Commissioners Named

The council approved John G. Weibel, James A. Perrin and Robert E. Barnard as commissioners for the closing of West lane.

The application of William A. Schneider and O. S. Higgins to open a cleaning and pressing establishment at 115 North Centre street was tabled until a lease is presented.

Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, was granted a permit for the Setlin and Wilson shows at the Community Park from May 27 to June 1, inclusive.

Legion Meets Tonight

Plans for the coming state convention of the American Legion will be discussed by members of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13 at a regular meeting tonight at 8 o'clock.

Robert Shaw Not Guilty

Wins Freedom In U. S. Court

A light docket marked the first term of United States district court held here since September, 1938, and all cases were disposed of yesterday.

Two men charged with operating unregistered stills were acquitted by juries after brief deliberations. They were Robert F. Shaw, 28, of Oldtown, and David Twigg, 57, also of Oldtown. Both were represented by Attorney Edward J. Ryan.

Two other men entered guilty pleas and were sentenced by Judge W. Calvin Chesnut.

After an eloquent plea for clemency by Attorney Clarence Lippel, Judge Chesnut sentenced Hammond to three months in jail and imposed a $100 fine. The jail term was suspended on condition the fine be paid at the rate of $10 monthly.

Charles L. Wigley, 40, of Bloomington, entered a guilty plea to a charge of illicit distilling and was sentenced to a year and a day in prison. A similar charge against his father, Charles D. Wigley, 63, was nolle prossed by Assistant District Attorney G. Randolph Aiken, who, with District Attorney Bernard J. Flynn, prosecuted the cases.

MAN SHOT TO DEATH IN PARK

Slayer Confesses, Declares Victim 'Stole My Wife'

Woman Sees Killing, Rides to Hospital With Dying Friend

Smouldering jealousy last night led a husband to shoot and kill a man he said had stolen his wife.

The shooting took place in Riverside park shortly after 9 p. m., while the wife looked on.

The dead man was Kermit Bailey, 24, of Ridgeley, a dishwasher at Porter's restaurant.

His confessed slayer was John H. Clifford, 32, of the Brunswick hotel, a Liberty Lunch employe.

Surrenders to Police

Ten minutes after the shooting Clifford walked into police headquarters and surrendered.

Desk Sergt. B. B. Browne quoted him as saying, "I just shot a man over at the park for stealing my wife."

Meanwhile, Officers John Powers and Harold Kennard, responding to a call from the West Side Pharmacy, arrived at the park to find Bailey mortally wounded, his head in Mrs. Clifford's lap.

The officers rushed the man to Allegany hospital, where he died a few minutes later without regaining consciousness. Mrs. Clifford, 21, rode to the hospital with him in the patrol wagon.

Signs Confession

After being questioned by Assistant Chief John J. Treiber and Detective R. E. Flynn and again admitting the slaying, Clifford was taken to the State's Attorney's office for further questioning.

There, according to County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle, he signed a confession. Boyle said he would be charged with murder.

Clifford told the officers that he had met his wife and Bailey at 6 p. m. at the M & A restaurant on Baltimore street to discuss what should be done with the Cliffords' three-year-old daughter, who has been living with Mrs. Clifford at the home of her mother, Mrs. Louisa Woods, 7 Blocher street, Ridgeley.

Bailey had been rooming at the same address, coming here from Baltimore the week after Easter.

Couple Separated

The prisoner said he and his wife, wed in August, had been estranged since the day after Easter, and that he wanted custody of the child.

After attempted to persuade the pair to go to his room in the hotel to thrash out the matter, Clifford said he agreed to meet them later in Riverside park.

There they met at about 8:30 p. m. The discussion continued for about a half-hour, growing more and more bitter.

They stood up. Then, Clifford said Bailey threatened to "mash my mouth in."

Victim "Reaches for Pocket"

At the same time, Bailey reached for his hip-pocket, according to Clifford.

Clifford declared he didn't know whether Bailey was merely reaching for a handkerchief or for a weapon.

Without waiting to see, he whipped out a .38 calibre revolver and fired three times. One bullet entered the left side near the heart, and emerged under the skin on the right side. It was this wound that doctors said caused death.

Bailey had another wound in the right shoulder and a bullet-hole through the right hand, near the base of the thumb.

Wife Blames Husband

Mrs. Clifford who is being held in the city jail as a material witness, told authorities however, that her husband shot without provocation.

Clifford's story about his interest in the custody of his daughter was confirmed by Assistant Chief Trieber.

The man had been to police headquarters several times in recent weeks to seek advice on regaining custody of the child, Treiber said. His last trip was about 8 o'clock last night, a scant hour before the shooting.

Chief Treiber said he told Clifford each time to consult a lawyer about court proceedings to win custody of the child and warned him he would get in trouble if he kept quarreling with his wife about it.

Disobeys Warning

Last night, after telling the assistant chief that he was supposed to try to reach an agreement with his wife on the matter, he indicated that he would not keep the appointment—that he would see a lawyer, as the chief suggested.

But he kept the appointment, and tragedy resulted.

There were conflicting versions of what ocurred after the shooting.

Detective Flynn said he had been told by by-standers that Clifford, after shooting Bailey, scuffled with his wife, then ran back, picked up the dying man and punched him in the face several times. Another version was that Clifford kicked the prostrate man.

Victim's Nose Broken

Doctors reported that Bailey's nose was broken and that he had other marks on his face.

The gun was found in the park.

All From Morgantown

Police said all the principals in the tragedy were formerly from Morgantown, W. Va. Clifford has been living here for about three years, they said.

Bailey's body was removed to Wolford's funeral home. Survivors were not immediately known, but it was said he has a sister in Baltimore.
